1 Chinese: Mandarin pronunciation of the Chinese surname 韩 (Hon in Cantonese romanization): (i) it is said that the surname is borne by descendants of Han Liu (韩流), grandson of the legendary Huang Di, the 'Yellow Emperor' (traditional dates 2697–2599 BC). (ii) shortened form of Han Yuan (韩原), the name of a fief (possibly present-day Hejin in Shanxi province or Hancheng in Shaanxi province) granted to Bi Wan, also known as Han Wan (韩万) or Han Wuzi (韩武子), a politician in the state of Jin during the Spring and Autumn period (770–476 BC). His descendants inherited the name of the fief as their surname. (iii) from Han (韩), the name of a state during the Warring States period (475–221 BC). The state was established in 403 BC and annexed by the state of Qin in 230 BC. Descendants of nobles from this state inherited it as their surname. (iv) From the Chu Da Han (出大汗) family of the Xianbei ethnic group in N China, who adopted the surname Han (韩) during the Northern Wei dynasty (AD 386–534).

1 English: (i) relationship name from the personal name Hann, a reduced pet form of Johannes 'John': compare Thomas filius Han, 1381 in Poll Tax (Withington, Lancs). Reduction to the second syllable is paralleled by the various forms of Nicholas like Col(le). Hann, Hancock, and Hankin are usually described as Flemish forms of John, but they are probably English formations, sometimes from Johan 'John'. Henecoc Cotun is probably identical with John de Coton, 1319 in Subsidy Rolls (London). Hanne was a very common given name in 13th-century Yorks (1274–97, in Wakefield Court Rolls). Some early bearers may belong under (2). (ii) Hann is in some instances a pet name for the more common Henry (compare Harry): compare Hanne or Henry de Leverpol, 1323 in Lancs Inquests. Richard Hannesone, 1379 in Nottingham Borough Records, is identical with Ricardus filius Henrici, 1365 in the same records. (iii) Camden takes Hann to be a pet form of Randolph, a rhyming form of Rann, which is linguistically possible, though Randolph was not among the more frequent given names in medieval England.

1 Scottish Gaelic, Irish: from Ó hAnnagh 'descendant of Annach', a personal name of uncertain origin, or from Ó hÉanna 'descendant of Éanna, also unexplained but well attested. See also Hannan. Black suggests that it may derive also from Sheanaigh, a genitive case form of the Gaelic personal and saint's name Seanach, but this is untenable.

Further information: Much of the confusion over this surname stems from the 'false locative' name of Gilbert 'de' Hannehe, the earliest Galloway bearer in 1296. However, it is clear from his appearance elsewhere as Gilbert Hahanith (Scotland Calendar) that this was merely caused by the lack of Gaelic literacy on the part of Edward I's clerks at his 1296 Berwick parliament. This was one of very few 'Ó' surnames to be used in Scotland, a phenomenon which was confined to the Galloway and Carrick region.

Early bearers: Gilbert De Annethe, Gilbert de Hannehe, 1296 in Scotland Calendar (Wigtowns), from Ragman Rolls; John Hanay, 1477 in Glasgow Register (Glasgow, Lanarks); Robert Ahannay of

- Current frequencies: GB 224, Ireland 0
- GB frequency 1881: 63
- Main GB location 1881: Lancs; also Staffs and Leics

English: (i) relationship name, a post-medieval variant of Annable, from Middle English Amabil, Annabel. See Amable. This female personal name fell out of fashion in the late Middle Ages, and the source of the surname was no longer recognized. It was reinterpreted in the 16th century by classically educated gentlemen as being the name of the Carthaginian general, Hannibal (247–182 BC). The surname was later sometimes re-etymologized as honey + ball or bell, hence spellings such as Honeyball and Hunnibell. In this new guise, it coincided with an established variant of Annable with initial H-: compare Johannes Hanable, 1377 in Poll Tax (Langford Budville, Somerset), and note Henrico Hanabulsone, 1379 in Poll Tax (Thringstone, Leics). (ii) there is no evidence for the use of Hannibal as a given name in England before 1619, when Hannibal Gammon was rector of Mawgan in Pyder, Cornwall (Withycombe). As a medieval surname, it was borne by Matthew Hanibal (1255, Close Rolls) and Peter Haniballus (Bardsley, quoting from an undated Patent Roll), both described as ‘civis Romanus’, and obviously Italians. A Roman surname from the Carthaginian Hannibal is somewhat surprising, but in any case it is unlikely that either of these Italian merchants or moneylenders founded an English family.

Early bearers: Johannes Hanable, 1377 in Poll Tax (Langford Budville, Somerset); Thomas Hannyball, 1513 in Oxford University Register; John Anyable, 1568 in Subsidy Rolls (Suffolk); John Hunnyball, 1588 in IGI (Lavenham, Suffolk); Moses Hunnibal, 1590 in IGI (Polstead, Suffolk); Sara Hannibal, 1635 in IGI (Groton, Suffolk); Thomas Honnibal, 1674 in IGI (Great Burstead, Essex); Benjamin Hannibal, 1747 in IGI (Loughborough, Leics); Thomas Hannibal, 1759 in IGI (Kegworth, Leics); Simon Honeyball, 1792 in Parish Registers (Suffolk); Thomas Hannibal, 1799 in IGI (Lancaster, Lancs); Elizabeth Hunnibal(d), 1821, 1824 in Parish Registers (Shotley, Suffolk); Elizah Honeybill, 1845 in IGI (Brereton cum Smethwick, Cheshire).

Hansard

Variants: Hazard

- Current frequencies: GB 164, Ireland 23
- GB frequency 1881: 93
- Main GB location 1881: Lincs

Norman, English: relationship name from the Middle English and Old French (originally Continental Germanic) personal name Ansard with prosthetic H-. In Anglo-Norman French -n- and -l- were often interchangeable, hence Halsard. Hausard is probably an error for Hansard. The reduced form Hasard may have contributed to Hazard.

Further information: There is no evidence for Reaney's suggestions that Halsard derived from Old and Middle English hals 'neck' + the pejorative suffix -ard, perhaps a nickname for someone with some peculiarity of the neck; or that Hansard derived from Old French, Middle English hansard 'cutlass, poniard'. As Reaney pointed out, the Norman surname is too early to denote a Hanseatic merchant, a sense first recorded in 1453 (MED). Nor is it likely to have an earlier supposed sense, 'a member of a merchant guild' for, although Old French hanse 'merchant guild' is recorded in Middle English by 1135, the surnames cited by MED as sole evidence for hansard 'a member of a merchant guild' are examples of the Old French personal name used as a patronymic.

Early bearers: Gilbert Hansard, 1166 in Red Book of the Exchequer, about 1170 in Rievaulx Cartulary (NR Yorks), identical with Gilbert Halsart, 1155–85 in Durham Liber Vitae (Yorks); Hugo Hasard, 1167, 1170, 1190 in Pipe Rolls (Hants); Halsard, Hasard, 1178 in Pipe Rolls (Hants); William Halsart, Hausard, 1177 in Pipe Rolls (Surrey); Geoffrey Hasard, 1185 in Templars Records (Lincs); Willelmus Haunsart, 1185–1215 in Durham Liber Vitae (Durham); Gilbert Hausard (son of Gilbert Hansard), 1196 in Pipe Rolls (Yorks), identical with Gilbert Haunsard, 1185–1215 in Durham Liber Vitae (Yorks); William Haunsard, 1230 in Pipe Rolls (Surrey); Roger

Haverfield

- GB frequency 1881: 33
- Main GB location 1881: SW England

English: (i) locative name, possibly an altered form of Auberville, the name of a 12th-century Norman family with lands in Suffolk. This Norman surname derives from either Auberville-sur-Eaulne (Seine-Maritime) or Aubeville-sur-Yère (Seine-Maritime). For the change of -ville to -field compare English surnames such as Dangerfield. The post-medieval name is recorded only in SW England, however, and must therefore either reflect unrecorded early migration from SE England or have a different origin. (ii) locative name, possibly from Middle English haver 'oats' (Old Scandinavian hafri) or perhaps Middle English haver 'he-goat' (Old English hæfer) + Middle English feld 'open country'. This is, however, an improbable source for the 1327 Suffolk name, borne by a woman of some wealth.

Early bearers: E Anglia: Matilda de Hauberuill, 1196–8 in Feet of Fines (Suffolk); Hugo de Auberuill, 1209 in Feet of Fines (Suffolk); Matilda de Hauerfeld, 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (Worlingham and Cove, Suffolk). It may have been given to a professional falconer, to someone of a savage or cruel disposition, to someone who held land by providing hawks for his lord, as in the 1130 instance, where Ralph Hauoc owed the royal Exchequer two 'girfals' (i.e. gyrfalcons or hawks). Some examples may belong under (2) or (3).

Hawkin

- Current frequencies: GB 174, Ireland 0
- GB frequency 1881: 628
- Main GB location 1881: WR Yorks and Lancs; Cornwall and Devon; London

English: relationship name from Middle English Haw, a rhyming pet form of Raw (Ralph), + the diminutive suffix -kin. Hawkyn or Haukyn mean 'young Ralph'. However, in 13th- and 14th-century handwriting -u- and -n- are often written identically. Some examples of Haukyn below may therefore belong under Hankin, but equally some of those under Hankin may belong here. Compare Haw (2), Rawkin, and Dawkin.

Further information: In The Vision of William concerning Piers the Plowman (written before 1387?) Langland named his fictional everyman figure 'Haukyn the actyf man', which strongly implies that in the late 14th century Haukin was a recognizable pet form of an everyday personal name, as Ralph undoubtedly was (see Ralph).

There is no basis for the common explanation of this name as a variant of Hal, a pet form of Harry. Hal is not recorded as a pet form of Harry before the 16th century. Nor could an earlier Hal have become vocalized to Haw much before about 1400, a century later than the earliest examples of Hawkin.

Reaney (Reaney and Wilson) suggested that all examples of Middle English Haukin derived from a pet form of the Old English personal name Hafoc + the Old French diminutive suffix -in. This seems unlikely, given that Hafoc was rare compared to Ralph, and may have been obsolete as a personal name by about 1250 (see Hawk). A Middle English Havekin may nevertheless have existed, and with /v/ often vocalized to /u/ (as in Old English hafoc becoming Middle English hawk 'hawk'), it could have contributed in a minor way to the modern surname Hawkin.

Early bearers: given names: Haukynus le cotoler, 1313 in York Freemen's Register (York); Haukyn Skinner, 1332 in Subsidy Rolls (Cumb).

1 Norman, Scottish, N English: locative name from one of many places in Normandy called La Haie or La Haye (Old French haie ‘hedged, enclosure’, a borrowing of the Germanic word haga).

Further information: Robert de Haia or de la Haye is known to have come from La Haye-du-Puits in Manche; he was founder of Boxgrove Priory in Sussex (1123), and holder of the Honour of Halnaker (Sussex) and (by marriage) the barony of Kolswein (Lincs). The Scottish Hays, close relatives of the Soules family, came from La Haye-Bellefonds, formerly La Haye-Hue, near Saint-Lô, also in Manche. The principal Scottish family with this surname can trace their descent from William de la Haye, Butler of Scotland in the reign of Malcolm IV (1153–65) and lord of Errol (Perths) by gift of William the Lion about 1178–82. The Norman name was also taken to Ireland, where it has since flourished in the county of Wexford as Hay and Hayes. Elsewhere in Ireland the name usually has a native Irish origin, see (5) below.

Early bearers: England: Geoffrey de la Haye, 1166 in Red Book of the Exchequer (Beds); Ranulf de Lahaia, 1119 in Colchester Cartulary (Essex); Richard de Hay, 1170 in Pipe Rolls (Lincs); Robert de la Haie, 1185 in Templars Records (Herts); Robt. 2 English: locative name from Middle English hay(e), heye, heghe 'enclosure' (Old English (ge)hæg) or 'forest fenced off for hunting' (Old French haie); or from a place so named, such as Hay (Herefs, Westm) or Hey in Scammonden (WR Yorks). It was no doubt sometimes synonymous with Hayward. Some of the following bearers may belong under (1), (3), or (4).

3 English: relationship name from the Middle English personal name Hai(e). The 12th- and early 13th-century surnames may represent either an Anglo-Norman French or a native English name. Old French Hai is recorded in the Latin form Haius in 11th/12th-century Paris. It is a pet form of Continental Germanic male names like Hagabert (Old French Haiebert) and **Hagabern*, which appears as H[a]ghebernus in Domesday Book.

Alternatively, these early surnames may be pet forms of a native Middle English male name like Heymund (Old English Hēahmund), which is evidenced in early 13th-century Norfolk, or a female name like Hehild (Old English Hēahhild), attested in the surname of Walter filius Hehilde, 1201 in Curia Regis Rolls (Lincs). In the late 13th and 14th centuries, however, it is possible that Hay was a variant of Haw, which, like Daw and Day, was used as a rhyming pet form of Ralph. Compare Dawkin and Dakin, and see Haycock.

Early bearers: Willelmus filius Hai, 1168 in Pipe Rolls (Bucks); Ricardus filius Haye, 1205 in Curia Regis Rolls

2 English: locative name from a plural form of Middle English hay(e), heye, heghe ‘enclosure’ (see Hay), sometimes used as a collective noun for a farm, especially in Devon, where it is a frequent minor place-name. Compare Hayne. However, the post-medieval surname is impossible to distinguish from (1) above, in which the surname Hay (also found in Devon) has acquired an excrement -s.

Early bearers: Richard de Heghes, 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (South Stoke, Sussex); Thomas Hayes, 1560 in IGI (Bovey Tracey, Devon); John Haies, 1640 in IGI (Ottery Saint Mary, Devon).

3 English; Norman, English: (i) locative name for someone from either of two places called Hayes (Middx, Kent), hence the particular frequency of the surname in the London area. Or, a topographic name for someone who lived near land overgrown with brushwood or underwood, especially young oak or beech. The etymon in each case is Old English hāsehēse, Middle English hese, which is also the source of the lost minor place-name Heys in Hellingly (Sussex), Northeast (Farm) and Southeast (Sussex), and Heys Wood (Kent). (ii) locative name from one of the French hamlets named La Haise (Eure, Ille-et-Vilaine, Sarthe). The original sense, like that of Old English hāse, was ‘land overgrown with brushwood or underwood’, and the Norman and English names are difficult to tell apart. The French surname was reintroduced to England after 1685 by Huguenots.

- 1 English: locative name for someone who lived at a place known as 'the hay land' or 'the enclosed land'. Middle English hai, hei can represent either Old English hæg 'hay, mown grass' or Old English gehæg, geheg 'fence, enclosure'. The 1255 example below is apparently formed with Middle English (Old French) la(u)nde 'open space in woodland, woodland pasture', but the term is sometimes difficult to tell apart from Middle English (Old English) land 'piece of land'. The 1279 Surrey name refers to Haylands Farm in Lingfield. Some of the following post-medieval bearers may alternatively belong with (2) or (3).

3 Welsh: relationship name; Morris, Welsh Surnames derives the name in English counties bordering Wales from the Welsh personal name Einws (a pet form of Welsh Einion) with a prosthetic H-; see also Enos. While this is linguistically possible there is no evidence yet to show that it was the origin of the surname, and it is more likely that the following bearers belong under (1).

English: (i) locative name, perhaps from Haysend in Tamerton Foliot (Devon), recorded in the surname of John de Hayeshende, 1332 in Subsidy Rolls (Devon). The alteration of -send to -som and -son would be unexceptional. (ii) alternatively it might, like Heesom, be an altered form of Eastham, but the evidence is inconclusive. (iii) possibly a variant of Hayson (2), but medieval names in -son are rare in SW England, where this surname is mainly found. Early bearers: Mary Haysom, 1580, Martha Hayson, 1635 in IGI (Mells, Somerset); Richarde Haysome, 1582 in IGI (Sturminster Marshall, Dorset); Joane Ayson, 1652 in IGI (East Coker, Somerset); Thomas Haysom, 1675 in IGI (Ringwood, Hants); William Haysom, 1685 in IGI (Exeter, Devon); Thomas Haysham, 1737 in IGI (Gosport, Hants); John Hayson, 1722, Christopher Haysham, 1753 in IGI (Swanage, Dorset); Richard Heesom, 1806 in IGI (Gosport, Hants).

- Current frequencies: GB 2387, Ireland 15
- GB frequency 1881: 2197
- Main GB location 1881: S England: esp. Hants, Wilts, and Dorset

1 English: (i) nickname from an unrecorded Old French word, **hait(i)er*, **haitour* ‘entertainer, merry-maker’, a derivative of Old French haitier, Anglo-Norman French heiter ‘to make glad, please, entertain’. Compare the synonymous Middle English surname Makehayt ‘make joy’ (see Mackett). (ii) locative name, perhaps, as suggested in Reaney and Wilson, from Middle English **heyter* ‘dweller at the hill top’, an agent noun from Middle English heyt ‘height, top, summit’ + -er. Compare Height. Middle English topographic surnames in -er are mostly found in S England, less commonly in the Midlands, and not at all in N England. However, this sense is not certainly evidenced in the southern surname. In the 1296 and 1332 examples from Sussex and Dorset it would require the substitution of Old French -(o)ur for Old and Middle English -er(e), which would be uncharacteristic of this type of name. The apparent absence of the synonymous atte Heyt in the medieval records of the south-coast counties is also counter-indicative (see Fransson, pp. 192–4).

Early bearers: William Haytere, 1260 in Assize Rolls (Cams); Reginald le Heytur, 1296 in Subsidy Rolls (Sussex); Willelmo Haytour, 1332 in Subsidy Rolls (Hillfield, Dorset); Johanne Haytur, 1332 in Subsidy Rolls (Knowlton in Woodlands, Dorset); Willelmus Heyter, 1381 in Poll Tax (Ufton Robert, Berks); John Haytour, 1409 in Patent Rolls (Plumpton, Sussex); Edithe Hayter, 1569, Melior Hill Haytor, 1697 in IGI (Mere, Wilts); John Heiter, 1605 in IGI (Winterbourne Earls, Wilts); James Hayter, 1670 in IGI (Martin, Hants); Edward Hayter, 1676 in IGI (Chichester, Sussex); Anthony Hayter, 1685 in IGI (Cranborne, Dorset); Sarah Hayter, 1698, Ann Hayter, 1828 in IGI (Urchfont, Wilts); John Heater, 1770 in IGI (Chieveley, Berks); Wm. Norman, English: (i) Anglo-Norman French variant of Hansard. (ii) nickname from Middle English (Old French) has(s)ard, haz(z)ard 'a game of dice', perhaps given to a player at hazard, i.e. a gambler, trickster, or rascal. Compare John Hasardour, 1366 in Colchester Court Rolls, whose name is from Middle English hasardour 'dicer, gambler'. (iii) possibly in some instances of Flemish origin, a nickname from Middle Dutch hasart 'hare'.

1 English: locative name for someone who lived in or by a nook or hollow or at a place named with this word (from Middle English hele, Old English heale, dative singular of healh 'nook or hollow'). English: nickname; this form is found in a number of very local names, e.g. field-names, unlikely to be the source of the surname. Probably therefore from **hemp-stock*, with some allusion to the useful fibre which can be got from the stalk of the hemp plant or to its upright growth. Hempstalk appears in the relevant area, but later than Hem(p)stock (note Thos. Hempstalk, 1746 in IGI (East Markham, Notts)), suggesting that the older sense of stock 'trunk, hard stem of a plant' was sometimes replaced by the similar sounding but more transparent stalk. Compare Hempseed.

1 English: locative name from Harome (in Ryedale, NR Yorks), recorded in Domesday Book as Harun, Harem, Harum. There was early confusion with the nickname in (2) and possibly with the locative name in (3). The place-name only has spellings in -a-, not -ai- or -e-.

Further information: The Scottish families are descendants of an Anglo-Norman, Jordan Hairun, who witnessed a charter of King David of Scotland in 1144, and held lands in Timble and in Kepwick (NR Yorks) in 1166. His son was Jordan Herum or Hayrun, who appears in the Rievaulx Cartulary, so his own father may have been Drogo de Hairum, who is recorded in the same cartulary in 1131. The 13th-century Northumb family called Herun or Heyrun is probably related.

Early bearers: England: Drogo de Hairum, de Harum, 1131 in Rievaulx Cartulary (NR Yorks), Drogo Hairun, 1196 in Pipe Rolls (Yorks); William de Harum, about 1150, William de Herun, about 1175 in Pipe Rolls (Yorks); William Herun, Heyrun, 1256 in Assize Rolls (Northumb); Jordan Herum, 1232, Jordan Hayrun, 1234 in Rievaulx Cartulary (NR Yorks); Roger Heroun of Ford (Northumb), 1311 in Yorks Deeds (North Cave, ER Yorks); Ricardus Herun, 1379 in Poll Tax (Monk Bretton, WR Yorks); John Heron, knight, 1412 in Inquisitiones post Mortem (Hessle, ER Yorks); Elizabeth Heron, 1564 in IGI (Atwick, ER Yorks); George Heronn, 1587 in IGI (Morpeth, Northumb); Thomas Heron, 1589 in IGI (Houghton le Spring, Durham); Edward Heron, 1591 in IGI (Hexham, Northumb); John Heron, 1657 in IGI (Gorton, Lancs).

1 Chinese: Cantonese form of the Chinese surname 何 (He in Mandarin pinyin), which meant 'ask' or 'what?' in ancient Chinese: (i) from the surname Han (韓), the name of a state during the Warring States period. In 230 BC the state of Han was annihilated by the state of Qin. Some of the descendants of Han Wang An (韓王安), the last king of Han, fled to the area around the Yangtze and Huai (淮) rivers, where the surname Han (韓) had a similar pronunciation to that of the Chinese character 何 (he) in the local dialects, so they adopted the surname 何 (He). (ii) from one of the 'Nine Sogdian Surnames', in Chinese also known as 'nine surnames of Zhaowu', because their ancestors came from Zhaowu, an ancient city in present-day Gansu province in NW China.

During the Sui and Tang dynasties (AD 581–987) there were nine Sogdian states in Central Asia, one of which was called He (何) in Chinese. Between AD 649 and 655, these states submitted to the emperor Tang Gao Zong (唐高宗) of the Tang dynasty. The people from this state and their descendants acquired the surname He. (iii) from the name of He Miao (何苗), who changed his original surname Zhu (朱) to He (何) during the Western Han dynasty (206 BC–AD 25). (iv) For some families, this surname is traced back to Suo Ming (锁铭), the son of an ambassador (Suo Nan, 锁南) from Tibet in the 12th century AD. Suo Ming was appointed to a post in Hezhou (in present-day Gansu province) and endowed with the surname He by the emperor Zhu Yuanzhang of the Ming dynasty in AD 1371. (v) a surname of the Tuyuhun (吐韩浑) ethnic group, originating in the Wudai period (AD 907–60).

2 Chinese: Cantonese form of the Chinese surname 贺 (He in Mandarin), meaning 'celebrate, congratulate' in Chinese: (i) a semantic variant of Qing (庆), which can be traced back to Qing Feng (庆封), the great-grandson of Qi Huan Gong (齐桓公, died 643 BC). In the Eastern Han dynasty, a descendant of the Qing family, Qing Chun (庆纯), a well-known official, changed his surname to He (贺), which has the same meaning as Qing (meaning 'celebrate'), because his surname Qing happened to be the given name of Liu Qing (刘庆), the father of the emperor Han An Di (汉安帝) (AD 94–125), which was a taboo that Qing Chun wanted to avoid. (ii) shortened form of disyllabic surnames such as He Lan (贺兰), He Lai (贺赖), He Dun (贺敦), which were surnames from the Xiebei (鲜卑) ethnic group, shortened to He through cultural fusion with the Han people during South and North dynasties (AD 420–589). This name is common in Henan province.

3 Chinese: Taiwanese and Hokkien form of the Chinese surname 和 (He in Mandarin, Wo or Woh in Cantonese romanization), meaning 'peace' in Chinese: (i) for some families, this surname is traced back to Xi He (羲和), an official in charge of astronomy during the reign of the legendary king Yao (尧), or the Emperor Yao (traditional dates 2367–2258 BC). His descendants He Zhong (和仲) and He Shu (和叔) took his given name He (和) as their surname. (ii) for other families, it is traced back to Bian He (卞和), a person from the state of Chu (楚) during the Spring and Autumn period (770–476 BC), who discovered a gem known as He-shi Bi (和氏璧). (iii) from Su He (素和), a disyllabic surname from the Xiebei (鲜卑) ethnic group.

4 Chinese: Ho is also used outside China to represent certain other Chinese surnames, namely 侯, 后, 後, and 郝, see Hau (1–4); also 霍, see Fok (1).

5 Korean: (Hō, 호; Chinese character 韩); all bearers of this surname in Korea are descended from the same ancestor. According to the legend associated with this name, in AD 48 a sixteen-year-old Indian princess arrived on the shores of Ch'angwŏn county in Kyŏngsang South province by boat. The Karak Kingdom's King Suro married her and out of respect for her origins allowed the second of their ten sons to take his mother's surname, Hō. Four clan seats in Korea are associated with this surname.

6 Vietnamese: Hố, unexplained. Probably from one or other of the Chinese names listed above.

Alternatively some of the examples cited in (1) could belong here.

English: (i) locative name from Hobhouse in Drewsteignton (Devon), or from a place named from an expression with the same etymology: ‘Hobbe’s house’ or ‘goblin house’ (Middle English hobbe ‘goblin’, from a derivative of the given name Robert or Robin). For such a name, compare Johannes Hobbecastel, 1379 in Poll Tax (Bremhill, Wilts). (ii) possibly a nickname from the very variable Middle English hobbe-thurs ‘hobgoblin’. No actual use of the term as a personal nickname has been found. But hobbe-thurs shows up in forms to some extent suggestive of Hobhouse and its variants in the Paston Letters (1489), ‘Mayster Hobbe Hyrste Robyn God-felaws brodyr’, and also in late forms collected by antiquarian writers such as ‘Hob Thrush, or ‘Hob o’ th’ Hurst’ (1867); and in the name of the Peak District sprite Hob Hurst seen in Hob Hurst’s House, a Bronze Age barrow on Beeley

Moor, Peak District, near Bakewell (Derbys).

Compare perhaps Hopthrow, Hoptroff.

Further information: Hobhouse is strongly associated with the Bristol area in the 18th century. It is a moot point whether the now extinct Hobes, with a not dissimilar distribution, is also a variant, though this may have since been assimilated to Hobbs, Hobbes. In the 19th century, Hobhouse is found in Sheffield, Mansfield, and Belper Poor Law Unions, i.e. around the edge of the Peak District.

Early bearers: Simon de Hobbehouse, 1332 in Subsidy Rolls (Drascombe, in Drewsteignton, Devon); John Hobhouse, 1524 in Subsidy Rolls (Devon), 1642 in Protestation Returns (Devon); Edward Hobbis, 1666 in IGI (Alvechurch, Worcs); Caleb Hobhouse, 1668 in IGI (Bristol, Gloucs); Petarnill Hobbis, 1673 in IGI (Brixham, Devon); Tho Hoppus, 1692 in IGI (Curdworth, Warwicks); Bethulia Hoppus, 1694 in IGI (Sittingbourne, Kent); Reuben Hobbis, 1712 in IGI (Long Itchington, Warwicks); Charlotte Hobhouse, 1787 in IGI (Westbury on Trym, Gloucs); James Hophouse, 1834 in IGI (Stepney, Middx).

- Current frequencies: GB 614, Ireland 13

1 Chinese: Mandarin and Cantonese form of the Chinese surname 洪 (Hung in Cantonese romanization), meaning 'vast' in Chinese: (i) adopted in place of another Chinese surname, 共 (Gong in Mandarin pinyin). In some families, this surname is traced back to Gong Gong (共工), an official during the reign of the legendary Huang Di, the 'Yellow Emperor' (traditional dates 2697–2599 BC). In other families, it is borne by descendants of people from the state of Gong (共) (located in present-day Huixian in Henan province), which was granted to Ji He, known as Gong Bo, an earl during the Western Zhou dynasty (1046–771 BC). For other families, it is borne by descendants of Shen Sheng, a prince in the state of Jin during the Spring and Autumn period (770–476 BC), who was given Gong as a posthumous title. His descendants inherited this title as their surname. Later, some of his descendants changed the surname to 洪 in order to escape persecution by their enemies. Thus, the surname 洪 shares some of the same ancestors as the surname 龔; compare Kong 3. (ii) adopted in place of another Chinese surname, 弘 (see sense 5 below), which originated in Yuzhang (present-day Nanchang in Jiangxi province) and Qu'e (present-day Danyang in Jiangsu province). 弘 was the given name of crown prince Li Hong (李弘) (AD 652–75) in the Tang dynasty. In ancient China it was taboo to bear the same name as a member of the royal family, so in Yuzhang and Qu'e people with the surname 弘 changed it to 洪, which has the same pronunciation.

2 Chinese: Cantonese form of the Chinese surname 杭 (Hang in Mandarin pinyin), adopted in place of another Chinese surname 抗 (Kang in Mandarin pinyin), which can be traced back to San Kang (三抗/杭/抗), a noble official in the state of Wei (卫) during the Spring and Autumn period (770–476 BC). The two Chinese characters 抗 and 杭 were interchangeable in ancient Chinese. During the Northern Song dynasty (AD 960–1127), many people with the surname 抗 changed it to 杭 (which has a different meaning and pronunciation in modern Chinese).

3 Chinese: Cantonese form of the Chinese surname 項 (Xiang or Hsiang in Mandarin romanization), meaning 'nape' in ancient Chinese: from Xiang (項), the name of an ancient state (in present-day Xiangcheng in Henan province), said to have been annexed by the state of Qi or the state of Lu in 647 BC.

4 Chinese: Cantonese form of the Chinese surname 匡 (Kuang in Mandarin pinyin), meaning 'rectify' or 'assist' in ancient Chinese: (i) from the place-name Kuang (匡), the name of a fief (in present-day Yutai in Shangdong province) in the state of Lu, which was granted to Gou Xu during the Spring and Autumn period (770–476 BC). (ii) from the place-name Kuang (匡), the name of a fief (in present-day Changyuan in Henan province) in the state of Wei (卫) during the Spring and Autumn period. (iii) from the place-name Kuang (匡), the name of a fief (in present-day Suixian in Henan province) in the state of Chu during the Spring and Autumn period. (iv) from the place-name Kuang (匡), the name of a fief (in present-day Fugou in Henan province) in the state of Zheng during the Spring and Autumn period.

5 Chinese: Mandarin form of the Chinese surname 弘 (Wang in Cantonese romanization), meaning 'great' in Chinese: from the second element of the personal name Hong Yan (弘演 or 弘延), style name of an official in the state of Wei (衛) during the Spring and Autumn period (770–476 BC).

6 Chinese: Cantonese form of the Chinese surname 康, see Kang (1).

7 Chinese: Hokkien and Taiwanese form of the Chinese surname 方, see Fong (1).

8 Chinese: Hokkien, Taiwanese, and Teochew form of the Chinese surnames 封, 豐, and 鄴, see Fung (2–4).

9 Chinese: another Cantonese form of the Chinese surname 熊, see Hung (3).

10 Chinese: non-standard romanization of the Chinese surnames 湯 and 唐, see Tang (1) and (2).

- Current frequencies: GB 687, Ireland 0
- GB frequency 1881: 468
- Main GB location 1881: Notts; Worcs, Warwicks, Oxon, and Berks

English: locative name, probably from a minor place in Oxon called Hobcroft, the exact location of which has not been identified. It is possibly represented by the 19th-century field-names Hopcroft Road and Hopcroft Close in Sydenham (Oxon), but these names seem more likely to incorporate the surname. The place-name means 'Hob'scroft', deriving from a pet form of the personal name Robert (see Hobb) + Middle English croft 'enclosure, small field'. The development of Hob- to Hop- appears to have taken place in the 17th century (though a 14th-century example, of uncertain relevance, is cited under Upercraft).

Further information: There is no evidence to support Wilson's derivation from Hopcroft Spinney in Orlingbury (Northants), which is not recorded before the 19th century (Place-Names of Northants, p. 130). The word hop (the plant used for making beer) is not recorded in English before 1440 in MED and is unlikely to have played a part in the development of this surname.

Early bearers: Richard Hobcroft, 1436 in Oseney Cartulary (Oxon); Thomas Hobcrofte, 1559, Jhon Hobcrafe, 1608, Millisent Hopcraft, 1648, Robert Hobcraft, 1779, William Hopcroft, 1807 in IGI (Fritwell, Oxon); Thomas Hobcrosst (in error for Hobcroft) 1561, Robart Hobcraft, 1776 in IGI (Long Crendon, Bucks); Richard Hopcraft, 1667 in IGI (Stratford upon Avon, Warwicks); William Hopcraft, 1678 in IGI (Leighton Buzzard, Beds); Samuel Hopcroft, 1725 in IGI (Hurley, Berks); John Hopcroft, 1733 in IGI (Sneinton, Notts); Richd. 2 English: nickname, perhaps for someone with a croaky or husky voice, from Middle English hos(e) 'hoarse', but the examples below are more likely spellings of Old French housé 'booted' and belong with Hussey.

Early bearers: Richard le Hose, 1243 in Assize Rolls (Somerset); Roger le Hose, 1275 in Subsidy Rolls (Worcs).

3 English: locative name from a place called 'the Hose', probably from an unrecorded Middle English **hose*, Old English **hās*, a side-form of Old English hāse, hēse 'underwood, especially of young beech or oak'.

Further information: This derivation seems to be borne out by the fact that William atte Hese, 1327, and William atte Hose, 1332 in Subsidy Rolls (Brightling, Sussex) are probably the same man (Surnames of Sussex, p. 267). For the etymology see East Anglian Bynames, p. 64, and Hayes. For alternative hypotheses about Middle English hose as a topographical term, see Reaney and Wilson, at Hose, English Place-Name Elements, pp. 263 and 278, at hys(s)e, and Place-Names of Essex, pp. 463–4.

Early bearers: Hugh de la Hose, 1189 in Pipe Rolls (Norfolk); Thomas de la Hose, 1254 in Feet of Fines (Hunts); Willelmus Hoose, 1379 in Poll Tax (Ashton Green, Sussex); Adam atte Hose, 1379 in Poll Tax (Ringmer, Sussex).

4 English: see Howes.

5 English: see House.

6 English: possibly a reduced form of Hosey, Hussey.

1 Norman, English: relationship name from the Middle English personal names Huward (also spelled Howard) and Heward, from Old French Huard, Continental Germanic Hugihard. As Hugh appears in Middle English as both How and Hew, this is the origin of Heward and a source of Howard. However, there has been confusion with Middle English Howard, see (2).

Early bearers: given names: Huardus, Houart, 1086 in Domesday Book (Herefs, Leics, Suffolk, Wilts); Huardus, Huardus de Bikeleg', 1214–19 in Curia Regis Rolls (Devon); Huart de Noerel, 1216 in Patent Rolls (Essex); Heward de Horewell, 1279 in Hundred Rolls (Cambs).

2 English: relationship name from the Middle English personal name Haward or Howard. This is usually an anglicized form of Old Danish Hāwarth (Old Scandinavian Hávarðr) and is perhaps a substantial source of the surname in Lincs and Norfolk, but (1) above is also found in Lincs and E Anglia and some of the following early bearers could belong there. Howard could alternatively represent Continental Germanic Howard, but it is uncertain to what extent this was in use among the Normans. The normal phonetic development would be to a modern pronunciation rhyming with the words lowered or lord, but it seems to have fallen together with (1) above, rhyming with the word coward. Alternation between Haward and Howard occurs in 12th-century Lincs and Norfolk, and later in the aristocratic Norfolk family, for which Bardsley notes 'my Lord Haward' (1503), and 'Henry Hawarde, Esq., son of Sir Thomas Hawarde, Viscount Bindon', who succeeded as Viscount Howard of Bindon (1565–6). It may have led to confusion with Hayward. Reaney points out that in the Parish Register of Horringer (Suffolk), about 1670–80, Hayward is regularly written Howard, and in the Walthamstow Toni court rolls from 1678 to 1882 the 'marshbaley' is often called the hayward or howard, so that some Howards may have been Haywards and vice versa. Further information: The house of Howard, the leading family of the English Roman Catholic nobility, was founded by Sir William Howard or Haward of Norfolk (died 1308). The family acquired the dukedom of Norfolk by marriage. The first Duke of Norfolk of the Howard line was created Earl Marshal of England by Richard III in 1483, and this office has been held by his succeeding male heirs to the present day. They also hold the Earldoms of Suffolk, Berkshire, Carlisle, and Effingham. Henry VIII's fifth queen, Catherine Howard (?1520–42), was a niece of Thomas Howard, 3rd Duke of Norfolk.

Early bearers: given names: Hauuard, 1086 in Domesday Book (Yorks); Houardus, 1086 in Domesday Book (Essex); Howard (a sokeman), 1101–7 in Saint Benet of Holme Register (Westwick, Norfolk); Haward de Wihton, 1165–6 in Pipe Rolls (Wighton, Norfolk), identical with Oward' de Wicton, 1165–6 in Pipe Roll, Chancellor's Copy; Houward Lomb, 1198 in Feet of Fines (Witchingham, Norfolk); Owardus, Houwardus, Howardus (identical), 1221–2 in Curia Regis Rolls (Suffolk).

1 English: (i) locative name pronounced to rhyme with hoe, who, or how, this name is from Middle English hoze 'spur of a hill, steep ridge, or slight rise' and denoted someone who lived in such a place. Hoze is from a late variant, hōge, of the dative case of the Old English root word, hōh. This literally meant 'heel (of a person) or hock (of an animal)'; in a transferred sense it was a common place-name element. The regular Old English dative singular, hō, is the source of the place-names Hoo and Hoe. The surname may also be from a place-name consisting of this word, for example Hoe (Norfolk), Hoo (Kent), or Hooe (Devon, Sussex). Hose (Leics) is named with the plural form of the word (see Howes), although early bearers apparently named from this place alternate between singular and plural forms. See also Hough, Dellow. (ii) locative name; Howe may also be from Old Scandinavian haugr 'mound, hill'. Without other evidence, this cannot be distinguished from howe 'spur of a hill'. It is certainly the origin of Howe (Norfolk) and of Howe Hill in Kirkburn (ER Yorks), where there is a tumulus beside which lived

Robert atte Hou in 1333 (Place-Names of ER Yorks, p. 166).

  - GB frequency 1881: 31
  - Main GB location 1881: Lancs and WR Yorks
- English: see Hayer.

Further information: Reaney treats the name as (Parisian) Old French (h)oir 'heir', a variant of Norman French heyr (see Ayre), citing William Hoyre, 1302 in Subsidy Rolls (Suffolk). However, Hoyre may be a scribe's or transcriber's misreading of Heyre, and so may be Johannes Hoyre, 1379 in Poll

Tax (Neatishead, Norfolk). The absence of any other evidence for this name until the late 18th century (in the London area) raises doubts about an English origin for the modern name. Some examples of the name in transcriptions of the 19th-century censuses are either misreadings of names like Hoyes and Heyer or may be similar miscopyings by the enumerators from their original householders' schedules.

Early bearers: Hoyle, 1659 in Kneen.

3 Irish: from Mac Giolla Chomhghaill, see McCool.

4 English: in southern counties of England the name is of uncertain origin. In some instances it could be the name in (1) by migration, but it is tempting to associate Margerie Hoyle, 1553 in IGI (Black Torrington, Devon), with the place called Hole in the same parish, and where William atte Hole is recorded in 1330 Subsidy Rolls (Devon); see Place-Names of Devon, p. 170. Hole is a common minor name and surname in Devon, but the surname Hoyle is not recorded in Devon earlier than the mid-16th century and would be an irregular phonetic development.

1 English: relationship name from the Middle English personal name Hucke or Hugge. Compare Uctredus pater Henrici et Ugge avus suus, 1212 in Curia Regis Rolls (Yorks), and see Oughtred. By the late 13th century, however, this personal name had probably fallen out of use and Hukke and Hug(ge) will usually have been variant pronunciations of Hugh or reduced forms of its pet forms Hukin (see Huckin) and Hugin (see Huggin). English: relationship name from the Middle English personal name Hudde, Hutte. This could represent Old English Hud(d)a or its Continental Germanic equivalent Hud(d)o, but Anglo-Norman French Hud(de), a pet form of Hugh, is probably the usual source. Compare Hugo filius Johannis . . . Johannis pater ipsius Hudde (Hugh son of John . . . John father of the same Hudde), 1212 in Curia Regis Rolls (Yorks). Similarly Hudde Sturdi, 1230 in Pipe Rolls (Yorks) appears as Hugo Sturdy, 1219 in Assize Rolls (Yorks).

Further information: Reaney, following Bardsley, cites Ricardus dictus Hudde de Walkden, 1346 in Close Rolls, as evidence that Hudde was also used as a pet form of Richard. However, this would involve some implausible phonetic substitutions, and it is safer to assume that Richard was alternatively known as Hugh.

English: (i) relationship name from the Middle English personal name Hugheman, also spelled Hugeman, Hiweman, Hueman, Howeman, Homan, and Huweman. It is a Middle Dutch pet form of Hugh with the hypocoristic suffix -man, and was probably introduced to Britain by Flemings after the Norman Conquest. For the suffix compare Bateman, Hickman, Pateman, and Potman. (ii) occupational name, status name denoting 'servant of Hugh'.

Similarly it is unlikely that Human or Howman derived from Old English Hygemund. The surname Xiong (Hung, 熊) is the second element of the title. (ii) traced back to Yu Xiong (鬻熊), who is said to have been the teacher of Zhou Wen Wang (1152–1056 BC). English: relationship name, perhaps a de-aspirated form of Hyanson, which appears to be a variant of Hinson; compare Ineson and Hindson. Hyanson might alternatively be for **Highamson* ‘son of someone surnamed Higham’; this is unrecorded but Higham is a common Lancs surname and the addition of -son to a locative surname is characteristic of post-medieval Lancs, where Hyansone occurs in 1605. The early spelling Janson is for Ianson. The apostrophe was added to make the pronunciation clear. The shift of stress from I- to An- in the modern pronunciation is in imitation of Irish names in O'. Compare I'Ons for Ions, seemingly a variant of Hines.

Further information: Reaney's identification of I'Anson with Janson mistakes the value of the letter J in the York Freeman's Register examples. In early handwriting i and its capital letter form J were used indiscriminately for the vowel and for the consonant /dʒ/ (as in jay). Printers similarly used capital I for both vowel and consonant, making it even more difficult to tell which of the two surnames was meant. One solution for Ianson was to insert an apostrophe to show that the I was pronounced as a separate syllable, and was therefore the vowel. Another solution was to use a phonetic spelling, as in the 1632–9 example Ayansonne, [ai] having become a northern dialectal pronunciation of Middle English long i by 1600; see English Pronunciation, p. 662.

1 English: locative name from Ince in Makerfield (Lancs), Ince (Cheshire), or Ince Blundell (Lancs). Early bearers: Richard de Ins, 1324 in King's Bench Pleas (Lancs); Stephanus Ins, 1377 in Poll Tax (Upton, Wilts); Ricardo de Ines, 1379 in Poll Tax (Ince in Makerfield, Lancs); Willelmo de Ins, 1379 in Poll Tax (Westby with Plumpton, Lancs); Isabella Ins, 1379 in Poll Tax (Wolston, Warwicks); John de Ines, de Ince, 1401 in Assize Rolls (Lancs); Henry de Ines, 1415 in Inquisitiones post Mortem (Lancs); John Ince, merchant, 1487 in York Registry Wills (Yorks); Radulph Ince, 1565 in IGI (Church Minshall, Cheshire).

2 English: the post-medieval W Midlands name may also be a variant of Hints; compare Roberti Hints, 1673, Robertus Ince, 1703 in IGI (Lapley, Staffs). But some of these early bearers could belong under (1).

Early bearers: Thomas Hince, 1599 in IGI (Shenstone, Staffs); Thomas Ince, 1601 in IGI (Kidderminster, Worcs); Ann Ince, 1635 in IGI (Madeley, Staffs); Marjery Ince, 1749 in IGI (Tanworth in Arden, Warwicks).

3 English: perhaps a variant with plural or post-medieval excrescent -s of Inn, from residence at an inn or inns, Middle English in (singular) or innes (plural) 'tavern, lodging(s), tenement(s)'. Compare Waltero atte Inne, 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (Fingrith Hall, Blackmore, Essex); Willelmo del In, clerk, 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (Writtle, Essex); Rogerus atte Ynne, 1377 in Poll Tax (Lashbrook, Oxon); Agnes atte Ine, 1379 in Poll Tax (Sussex). On the other hand, the spelling Ynce for such a name, as early as 1379, would be unusual, and Ines (1379) might be a misreading of Iues (i.e. Ives), so the name in E Anglia and the counties around London may alternatively belong with (1) or (2) by migration.

Further information: There seems also to have been some confusion with Scottish Innes.

Early bearers: Thomas Ynce, 1379 in Poll Tax (Great Plumstead, Norfolk); Johannes, Alicia Ines, 1379 in Poll Tax (Worstead, Norfolk); Edmund Ins, Ince, 1474 in Close Rolls (Suffolk); Lewes Hince, 1554 in IGI (Stoke Goldington, Bucks); Elizabethes Ines, 1571 in IGI (Westbourne, Sussex); Anthony Ince, 1577 in IGI (Saint Giles Cripplegate, London); Hugh Ince, 1583 in IGI (Chipping Ongar, Essex); Rowland Inns, 1594 in IGI (Barnet, Herts); Ann Hince, 1646 in IGI (Norwich, Norfolk); John Ince, 1666 in IGI (Lavenham, Suffolk); Thos Ines, 1682 in IGI (Great

- 1 English: locative name, possibly from Ingestre (Staffs), which is recorded as Ingestrent in the 12th century, Inglystre in 1373, Inglestre in about 1540. The place-name, which clearly gave rise to a medieval surname, shows various irregular developments over the centuries, an intrusive -l- being one of them. - Variants: Ions

  - GB frequency 1881: 145
  - Main GB location 1881: Westm
- English: probably a variant of Hine with the loss of initial H-. The source of the glide vowel is uncertain. It could be Middle English, if Willelmo Yon, 1379 in Poll Tax (Pleasington, Lancs), and Henricus Yon', 1379 in Poll Tax (Burton Leonard, WR Yorks) are examples of this name, but they could have different origins. Compare Ineson and I'Anson.
- Further information: It is possible that some 16th- and 17th-century examples of Ian and Ion should be read as Jan (see Jan) and Jon (see John), but the distributional evidence suggests that they are early examples of modern Ion.

Jewish, Welsh: relationship name from the Biblical Hebrew personal name Isaac. This is from Hebrew yishāq ‘he laughs or smiles’ or ‘may He (i.e. God) smile on him’, and was the name of the son of Abraham (Genesis 21:3) by his wife Sarah. The personal name was widely used in medieval Europe among Christians as well as Jews, hence its emergence as a gentile surname in the medieval and early modern periods. Adoption of surnames in Wales and in the Jewish community generally occurred much later than elsewhere in Britain. In Wales the personal name was particularly popular among Nonconformists in the 17th–19th centuries, and this probably accounts for its frequency as a Welsh surname. It is also found as a surname, derived from the given name, among families from southern India.

English: (i) relationship name from the Middle English and Old French female personal name Iseld, Iseut, Isalt, Isaut, Isolde, Isoud, a French adaptation of Old Cornish Eselt 'looked up to, admired'. Its currency in post-Conquest England derived from the legend of Tristan and Isolde, Cornish versions of which gained huge popularity in medieval Europe through romantic retellings by German, French, and Anglo-Norman writers. (ii) relationship name from the Middle English female personal name Isot, a pet form of Iseld, Isold.

Further information: Iseld or Isold(e) was formerly but incorrectly identified as a hypothetical Continental Germanic **Ishild(is)*, developing to Isheld, Ishaut, and Isholt; see Forssner, pp. 164–5, referring to Iseldis in Morlet, Noms de Personne 1, p. 147, are simply the latinized form of the romance name. The common surname form Izzard shows post-medieval substitution of -ard in the final syllable of Middle English Iso(u)d or Isot, influenced by the pattern of variation in names like Gillard, Gillett, Gillott, and Gillatt, or Garrard, Garrod, and Garrett, where in many instances the final -ard is original.

English: (i) relationship name from the Middle English and Older Scots personal name Jak, Jakke, Jagge, Jake, Jeke, Jegge, a Picard-Flemish denasalized variant of Old Picard and Middle Dutch Janke, a pet form of Jan (John). It was introduced by Flemings and Picards into Norman and Anglo-Norman usage, whence it became a common English pet form of John. 1 Jewish (Ashkenazic): relationship name from the Old Testament personal name, Hebrew Ya'aqob.

The pronunciation with initial ‘jay’ reflects anglicization of Continental ‘ya’. See also Jacoby, Jacobs, and Jacobson.

Medieval clerks latinized both as Jacobus, so it is difficult to tell how common each of the two vernacular forms was.

Jacobson

Variants: Jacobsen

- GB frequency 1881: 442
- Main GB location 1881: Middx; Lancs; also Shetland

1 English: relationship name from the Middle English personal name Jacob + son. See further under Jacob (3).

Early bearers: William Jacobson, 1332 in Subsidy Rolls (Cumb); Peter Jacobbesson, 1375 in Colchester Court Rolls; John Jacobson, 1719 in IGI (Wirksworth, Derbys); James Jacobson, 1782 in IGI (Harbottle, Northumb); Thomas Jacobson, 1822 in IGI (New Sleaford, Lincs).

2 Jewish (Ashkenazic): relationship name from the patronymic, 'Jacob's son'. Compare Jacob (1) and Jacobs (1).

Early bearers: Isaac Jacobson, born in Prussia, in Census 1881 (Saint Pancras, London); Abbram Jacobson, born in Germany, in Census 1881 (Hackney, London); Morris Jacobson, born in Russia, in Census 1881 (Bethnal Green, London); Nathan Jacobson, born in Russia, in Census 1881 (Cheetham, Lancs).

3 Scandinavian: relationship name from Danish and Norwegian Jacobsen, Swedish Jacobsson, denoting 'Jacob's son'. The 1881 Census of British ports and harbours frequently lists Scandinavian seamen, some of whom are recorded as naturalized British subjects with families resident in Britain.

Early bearers: Rudolph B. Jacobsen, naturalized British subject, born in Copenhagen, in Census 1881 (West Derby, Lancs); Henry Jacobson, British subject, born in Norway, in Census 1881 (Bishopwearmouth, Durham); William Jacobson, British subject, born in Sweden, in Census 1881 (Crawcrook, Durham).

Jacoby

Variants: Jacobi

- GB frequency 1881: 114
- Main GB location 1881: London; also Lancs

1 German, Dutch, Jewish: relationship name from Latin (filius) Jacobi '(son) of Jacob or James'.

Further information: From the 16th century onwards in some parts of northern Europe, men with a classical education sometimes dignified their surname (in this case Jacobs or Jakobs) by translating it into Latin. The surname was borne by Ashkenazic Jews, who had adopted the German surname before migrating to Britain in the late 19th century. Most settled in and around London, where the surname is still most common. For them it represented a patronymic from the Old Testament name Jacob (Hebrew Ya'aqob). For Continental Christians Jacob, pronounced with initial 'ya', stood for both Old Testament Jacob and New Testament James in British usage. See further under Jacob, James. Pronunciation with initial 'jay' reflects anglicization.

Early bearers: Dederick Jacoby, 1735 in IGI (Newcastle upon Tyne, Northumb); Conrad Jacoby, 1763 in IGI (Spitalfields Christ Church, Stepney, London); Frederick Jacoby, born in Germany, in Census 1881 (Islington, London); Abraham Jacoby, born in Poland, in Census 1881 (Mile End Old Town, London).

2 English: relationship name; although the evidence is slight and ambiguous, it is possible that Jacoby and

Jacobi occasionally derive from a native English patronymic, a pet form of Middle English Jacob using the diminutive suffix -y. However, it is impossible to distinguish Middle English **Jacoby* from an elliptical form of filius Jacoby, a clerk's ad hoc Latin translation of Jacobs or James, meaning '(son) of Jacob or James'.

Further information: The Latin form is unlikely to have been used in speech as a hereditary surname in medieval England. In the 16th century and later it may have been adopted as a learned version of Jacobs or James, similar to the practice in N Germany and the Low Countries, but there is little evidence to support this. The 19th-century Suffolk surname may alternatively have a Continental origin and belong under (1) above.

Early bearers: Thomas Jacoby, 1275 in Hundred Rolls (Norfolk); Piers Jacoby, 1338 in London Pleas; Henry Jacobi, 1818 in IGI (Ipswich, Suffolk); Thomas Jacoby, born in Great Yarmouth, Suffolk, in Census 1881 (Mile End Old Town, London).

Norman, English: relationship name, perhaps from the Old French personal name Jacqueme, the Picard form of James (Latin **Jacomus*), but evidence of English use of the name is lacking. 1 Cornish: relationship name of uncertain origin. It cannot be from the Old Cornish given name **Iagū* (from Latin Iacobus, i.e. James). This is recorded in place-names, but as with all native Cornish given names, it appears to have died out by the period of family-name formation (12th–15th centuries). Given the frequency and wide distribution of Jago as a surname in Cornwall, it is likely to derive from a relatively common Middle English given name and belong to the group of late medieval names having Cornish -ow as a hypocoristic suffix, such as Clemo. It could perhaps be a variant of Jacko (see Jacka), a Cornish form of the common Middle English given name Jakke, a pet form of John (see Jack).

Alternatively it might be a pet form of the less common Middle English James or Jacob, both latinized as Jacobus, which is recorded as a given name in medieval Cornwall. In either case Jago will have arisen by Middle English voicing of /k/ to /g/ between vowels, as seen in Diggins for Dickens. However, no examples have been found of Jago alternating with Jaco, apart from Verdinando Jaco or Jago, 1729 in IGI (Axminster, Devon), which could equally be evidence of later unvoicing of /g/ to /k/. Early bearers: Johannes Jagowe, 1428 in Feudal Aids I (Probus, Cornwall); John Jagowe, 1463 in Cornish Lands (Rescorla, in Saint Ewe, Cornwall); Simon Jagowe, 1522 in Cornwall Military Survey (Liskeard, Cornwall); William Jagoo, 1525 in Subsidy Rolls (Rockbeare, Devon); Mary Jago, 1546 in IGI (Sydenham Damerel, Devon); Jellian Jago, 1568 in IGI (Golant, Cornwall); Tho. Jagowe, 1575 in IGI (Bodmin, Cornwall); Walter Jagoe, 1638 in IGI (Dartmouth, Devon); Hy Iago, 1684 in IGI (Mevagissey, Cornwall).

2 Breton, Huguenot: relationship name, (Breton Jago, Jagou) from the Old Breton given name Iacu, Iagu. The family name was brought to Cornwall in the 16th century by Breton migrants and later to other parts of England by Huguenot refugees. This is an occasional rather than the usual origin, for the family name is too widespread across Cornwall and parts of Devon at too early a date for a Breton origin to be likely.

Early bearers: Martin Jago, alien, 1524 in Subsidy Rolls (Kingstreignton, Devon); Anne Jago, 1688 in IGI (Threadneedle Street French Huguenot, London).

- Main GB location 1881: widespread; esp. S Wales
- Main Irish location 1847–64: Wexford and Carlow; also Sligo

English, Welsh: relationship name from the Middle English and Modern English personal name James. Introduced to England by the Normans, it is an Old French form of late Latin Iacōmus, from Latin Iacōbus, which is a latinization of Hebrew Ya'aqob, the name of an Old Testament patriarch, progenitor of the 12 tribes of Israel (Genesis 49). It is also the name of two of Jesus's disciples in the New Testament. The medieval Latin (Vulgate) Bible distinguished between the Old Testament and New Testament names by rendering the first as uninflected Iacob (modern Jacob) and the second as Iacobus; only the latter developed to Old French and Middle English James. The distinction was carried over into the English Bible, including the King James Bible of 1611, and Jacob and James remain as separate names in English usage. Most European languages, however, make no such distinction, so that Iacob(us) and other derived forms, such as French Jacques, stand for both the Old and the New Testament names. Compare Jacob, Jack, and Jago. In the Latin records of post-Conquest England, Iacobus, often written Jacobus, may sometimes be a latinization of Jacob, but mostly represents James or one of its Old French or Middle English variants such as Jame (without the nominative case ending -s), Jeme, and Jemes, sometimes spelled Gemes, giving rise to Gemme, Jemme, and perhaps Jimme as Middle English pet forms. As a modern surname, James is most strongly associated with S Wales, where it is a comparatively recent coinage. See also Gem, Gimson, Jameson.

Further information: In spite of the popularity of the cult of Saint James the Greater, whose shrine at Compostela in Spain was a major centre of pilgrimage, James was not a particularly common personal name in medieval England. In the late 14th-century Poll Tax Returns Jacobus (probably representing both James and Jacob) was borne by about two men in every thousand. In 15th-century Wales, however, James was borne by about one per cent of men.

Early bearers: given names: Jacobus, 1160 in Danelaw Documents (Lincs); Jam' de Sancto Hylario, 1173–6 in Northants Charters (Northants); James or Jacobus de Audithleg', 1255 in Hundred Rolls (Shrops). surnames: Walter James, Emma James, 1187 in Pipe Rolls (Gloucs); Cristiana Jemes, 1279 in Hundred Rolls (Cambs); Will'o fil' Jacobi, 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (Selston, Notts); Thomas Jemes, 1332 in Subsidy Rolls (Warwicks); John James, 1392 in Inquisitiones post Mortem (Notts); John Jamys, 1563 in IGI (Thornbury, Gloucs); Robert James, 1591 in IGI (Sidbury, Shrops); William James, 1695 in IGI (Walsall, Staffs); Thomas James, 1757 in IGI (Llantrisant, Glamorgan).

(ii) alternatively, the several rare variants with a front vowel in the final syllable, for example Jessimine, Jessimen, Jessamin, the almost universal medial syllable as in these and Jessaman, and the complete lack of a final -d- or -th in the record suggest a nickname from Early Modern English gessemine, regional jessamy 'jasmine' or a form close to these. English: nickname from Middle English juven, juvin ‘young’ (Anglo-Norman French joefne, Latin juvenis), used to distinguish between two bearers of the same personal name. Compare Jeune.

Further information: Bardsley cites Jevan or Evan Thomas, 1600 (Glamorgan) as evidence that modern Jevon is a variant of Welsh Evan, but in this instance the initial J is an alternative way of writing I, and represents a semi-vowel glide before another vowel, more conventionally spelled Y, as in York and yew.

Early bearers: Alexander le iouene, 1154–89 in Danelaw Documents (Lincs); John le Jofne, 1200 in Curia Regis Rolls (Herts); Bartholomew le Joevene, le Juvene, 1254–69 in Ramsey Cartulary (Beds); Robert le Jeofne, le Jevene, 1242–55 in Book of Fees (Northants); Thomas le Geven’, 1279 in Hundred Rolls (Oxon); Thomas Ieuane, 1436 in Oseney Cartulary (Oxon); John Jevanne, 1459 in Oseney Cartulary; William Jevon, 1585 in IGI (Tipton, Staffs); John Jevan, 1586 in PROB 11 (Brill, Bucks); Richard Jeven, 1621 in PROB 11 (Sedgley, Staffs).

1 English: relationship name from the Middle English given name Jewe, also found as Julle, Gelle, Golle, Jowe, and Juwe. It was a pet form of the male name Julian or the female name Juliane (also Gellian). See Julian and compare Gill from Gillian. Some examples may belong under (2).

Early bearers: given names: Golle, 1203 in Pipe Rolls (Essex), 1219 in Assize Rolls (Yorks, female); Gewe de Sumerkotes, 1275 in Hundred Rolls (Lincs); Jowe, 1227 in Assize Rolls (Bucks), 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (Derbys), 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (Somerset).

surnames: Tomas filius Golle, 1196 in Pipe Rolls (Yorks); Richard Juwe, 1288 in Ramsey Cartulary (Cambs); John Jowe, 1297 in Earldom of Cornwall Accounts; Richard Jue, 1314 in Feet of Fines (Essex); Robert Julle, 1317 in Assize Rolls (Kent); Robert Julle, 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (Sussex); William Jolle, 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (Sussex); William Goll, 1421 in York Freeman’s Register; Stephen Jew, 1563 in IGI (Saint Botolph without Aldgate, London); Jacobs Jew, 1617 in IGI (Talland, Cornwall); John Jew, 1633 in IGI (Upton Snodsbury, Worcs).

2 English: nickname from Middle English Jeu ‘Jew’, applied to someone (whether Jewish or not) who was suspected of usury or who drove a hard bargain. In medieval England only Jews could legally lend money for profit, but they were expelled in 1290 and were not officially allowed to return and settle until the late 17th century, well after the main period of English surname creation. Post-1290 bearers of the surname are therefore most unlikely to be Jews, as are bearers with Christian forenames, such as Thomas in the 1275 example.

Early bearers: Thomas le Jeu, 1275 in Hundred Rolls (Notts); Willelmo le Jeu, 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (Shilvinghampton, Dorset); Nicholas le Jeu, 1332 in Subsidy Rolls (Peters Marland and Crediton, Devon); Roger le Jew, le Jeu, 1332 in Subsidy Rolls (Colyton and Ringmore, Devon); Hug’ le Jeu, 1332 in Subsidy Rolls (Hindley, Lancs); Hugo le Jowe, 1381 in Poll Tax (Haigh, Lancs).

- Current frequencies: GB 51, Ireland 8
- GB frequency 1881: 81
- Main GB location 1881: SE England: esp. Sussex

1 English: locative name, probably from one of the three places called Ewhurst (‘yew wood’) in Sussex, or possibly one of those in Surrey or Hants.

Further information: Pronunciation of Ewhurst with initial /dʒ/, as in jew, could have arisen from an Anglo-Norman French substitution of /dʒ/ for /j/, the initial sound in yew, but more likely it was a post-medieval spelling pronunciation from misinterpretation of the letter J- (an alternative form of capital I), which was used to represent both initial /dʒ/ and /j/. Ewhurst in Shermanbury (Sussex) is recorded as Jewhurst alias Ewhurst in 1599. The same usage appears in early forms of the Sussex place-name Jevington (Yevinton in 1439, Jevington in 1491). Refashioning of the name as Jewess and Jewish suggests that pronunciation with /dʒ/ was current by the late 17th century. Alternative pronunciation with initial /j/ was still in use in the 19th and early 20th centuries; compare Samuel Youhurst, 1805 in IGI, Horsham, Sussex) and Wesley Yewhurst (born in Brede, Sussex) in Census 1911 (Eastbourne, Sussex). Early bearers: William de Iuehurst, 1279 in Assize Rolls (Ewhurst Place in Ifield, Sussex); Robert de Ywenesherst, 1296 in Subsidy Rolls (Kirdford and Woolavington, Sussex); John Jewhurst, 1596 in IGI (Etchingham, Sussex); Elysbeth Jewhurst, 1612 in IGI (Benenden, Kent); Stephen Jewurst, 1660 in IGI (Bodiam, Sussex); Richard Youhurst, 1662 in IGI (Kingston upon Thames, Surrey); Jane Jewess, 1692

References: Place-Names of Sussex, pp. 208, 213, 518.
2 English: locative name; alternatively it may be a variant of Dewhurst; compare Jewsbury for Dewsbury. Dewhurst is historically located in N England, especially Lancs and WR Yorks, and a small number of surnames from these counties appear in mid-17th-century Sussex (Surnames of Sussex, p. 118). However, Dewhurst does not occur in Sussex, Kent, and Surrey before the 19th century, whereas Jewhurst occurs already in 16th-century Sussex and is not found in N England until the 19th.

1 Chinese: Mandarin form of the Chinese surname 蔣 (Chiang in Mandarin romanization, and Cheung, Cheong, or Tseung in Cantonese romanization): from Jiang (蔣), the name of an ancient state (probably located in present-day Henan province), which was granted to Bo Ling, a grandson of the king Zhou Wen Wang (1152–1056 BC). After this state was annexed by the state of Chu, people kept the name of the state as their surname.
2 Chinese: Mandarin form of the Chinese surname 姜 (Chiang in Mandarin romanization, Keung in Cantonese romanization), meaning 'ginger' in Chinese: the surname is traced back to the legendary Yan Di, the 'Yan Emperor', who ruled approximately from 3216 to 3077 BC. He was born near Jiang Shui (姜水), a river in present-day Shaanxi province. He and his descendants acquired 姜 (Jiang), part of the place-name, as their surname. A famous descendant, Jiang Shang, known as Jiang Ziya or Jiang Tai Gong (c. 11th century BC), an official during the Western Zhou dynasty (1046–771 BC), was granted the state of Qi, which is located mainly in present-day Shandong province.

Job

Job

Variants: Jobe, Jobes, Joep, Jopp, Jubb, Jupp, Jupe

• GB frequency 1881: 904

• Main GB location 1881: Cornwall and Devon; Warwicks; Carmarthens and Glamorgan; Lancs

• Main Irish location 1847–64: Longford; Fermanagh

1 English: relationship name from the Middle English given name Jop(e), Joppe, or Job(be) (perhaps also Jubbe). It may have more than one source, but like Jepp and Jebbe (see Jepp) it was certainly a pet form of Geoffrey. This is shown by Geoffrey [son of] Joppe of Wardley, who is also named as Geoffrey son of Geoffrey, 1292 in Lancs Eyre Roll. Joppe was originally a pet form of Joffrey, an Old French side-form of Geoffrey (see Jeffrey). A short form Joff(e) is attested in Willelmus Joffe, 1379 in Poll Tax (Warwicks), and Willelmus Joff, 1381 in Poll Tax (Saddington, Leics). The change of final /f/ to /p/ is the same as that in Jeff(e) to Jepp(e). The voicing of final /p/ to /b/ and variation in the length and quality of the vowel have led to possible confusion with other names, and some of the following name bearers may alternatively belong under (2), (3), or (4).

Early bearers: given names: Jop serviens Osulf, 1185 in Pipe Rolls (Cornwall); Joppe filius Hardekin, 1199 in Pipe Rolls (Lincs); Jubbe de Donewiz, 1275 in Hundred Rolls (Suffolk); Joppe Winter, 1292 in Lancs Eyre Roll. surnames, Devon and Cornwall: William Jobbe, 1332 in Subsidy Rolls (Exeter, Devon); Lucus Job, 1377 in Poll Tax (Saint Martin, Cornwall); Henry Jobe, 1544 in IGI (Saint Columb Major, Cornwall); Thomasin Jope, 1553 in IGI (Yarcombe, Devon); William Jobe, 1593, Temperance Job, 1595 in IGI (Exeter, Devon); Jonathas Joppe, 1595 in IGI (Bodmin, Cornwall); Richard Jobb, 1616 in IGI (Constantine, Cornwall); John Job, 1645 in IGI (Camborne, Cornwall). surnames, E England: Rogerus Juppe, about 1175 in Newark Documents (Newark, Notts); William Job, 1202 in Feet of Fines (Norfolk); Elyas Jubbe, 1230 in Pipe Rolls (Norfolk); Willelmo Jop, 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (Littel Oakley, Essex); Lucy Joppe, 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (Wood Walton, Hunts); Johannes Joppe, 1379 in Poll Tax (Carbrooke, Norfolk); Walterus Jubbe, 1379 in Poll Tax (Saxlingham, Norfolk); Thomas Jobbe, 1381 in Poll Tax (Great Bowden, Leics); Johannes Jubbe, 1381 in Poll Tax (Smeeton Westerby, Leics); Willelmus Joupe, 1381 in Poll Tax (Lincs); James Job, 1566 in IGI (Saint Albans, Herts); Margaret Job, 1588 in IGI (Cley next the Sea, Norfolk); Willm. 1640 in IGI (Leith, Midlothian); Alison Jopp, 1686 in IGI (Duns, Berwicks); Hew Jopp, 1694 in IGI (Huntly, Aberdeens).

2 English: relationship name, perhaps from a Middle English pet form of Old French Jobert. See Jobber and compare Jobin and Jobborn.

3 English: relationship name, perhaps also from Job, Joppe, Middle English forms of Job, a Hebrew name borne by the long-suffering central character of the Book of Job in the Old Testament. Evidence for its use as a Christian name in pre-Reformation Europe is scanty, however, and the commonly held beliefs (for example in Bardsley, Weekley, and Reaney and Wilson) that Job was a (frequent) character in the medieval mystery plays, and that this gave rise to a popular Middle English given name, are without foundation.

4 English: nickname from Middle English joppe (Medieval Latin joppus) ‘fool’, perhaps related to 16th-century French jobe ‘simpleton’. Compare Middle English jobard and jobet ‘blockhead, fool’.

Early bearers: Eudo le Joep, 1290 in Subsidy Rolls (Surrey); Matthew le Jop, 1327–77 in Place-Names of Essex (Essex).

Jobber

Variants: Jubber, Juba

• Current frequencies: GB 175, Ireland 0

• Main GB location 1881: Staffs

1 Norman, English: relationship name, perhaps from a reduced form of the Middle English (Old French) personal name Jo(i)bert; compare Joubert. This is suggested by the Staffs location of modern Jobber, where other variants of Jobert may survive in the names of Mary Jobet, 1718 in IGI (Lichfield, Staffs), Samuell Jobett, 1730 in IGI (Derby, Derbys), Thomas Jobbitt, 1774 in IGI (Walsall, Staffs), and Sarah Jobbard, 1822 in IGI (Darlaston, Staffs). See also Jobin and Jobborn, which have Staffs associations and may be pet forms of Jobert. Some of the following early bearers may alternatively belong under (2) or (3).

Early bearers: Ernaldi Joberti (in the genitive case), 1230 in Close Rolls; John Joyberd, 1256 in Assize Rolls (Hants); Robert Joyberd, 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (Essex); William Joberd, 1332 in Subsidy Rolls (Stokeinteignhead, Devon); Johanne Joyberd, 1379 in Poll Tax (Burbage and Durley, Wilts); Richard Jobber, 1565 in IGI (Blymhill, Staffs); Joanne Jobber, 1584 in IGI (Lichfield, Staffs); John Jobber, 1683 in IGI (Walsall, Staffs); Thomas Jober, 1684, Thomas Jobber, 1691 in IGI (Shifnal, Shrops); Sarah Jubber, 1703 in IGI (Salisbury, Wilts); Sarah Jubber, 1737 in IGI (Portsmouth, Hants).

2 English: occupational name from Middle English jobber, of uncertain meaning. Richard le Jobbere (1277–8, in a copy dated 1662) was a carpenter, paid for working and making huts at Vale Royal Abbey near Northwich, Cheshire. The name might be a derivative of job ‘a piece of work’, though the word is not recorded in OED before the mid-16th century;

hence ‘piecemaker’ perhaps. Other examples of the name might be derivatives of Middle English jobben ‘to peck or poke (something)’ (with a mattock perhaps) or of Middle English jubbe, jobbe ‘a large vessel for holding liquids’, hence ‘maker and seller of jubb’s’.

Early bearers: Richard le Jobbere, 1277–8 in Vale Royal Abbey Ledger Book (Cheshire); Roger Jubber, 1298 in Close Rolls; Alan Iober, 1317 in Assize Rolls (Kent); Robert Jobour, 1356, Robert Jober, 1369 in London Letter Books G; Thomas Jobber, 1524 in Subsidy Rolls (Suffolk).

3 English: nickname, perhaps from a reduced form of Middle English jobard ‘fool’.

Jobborn

Variants: Joberns

• GB frequency 1881: 17

• Main GB location 1881: Staffs

English: perhaps a variant of Jobin, with -bin reinterpreted through hypercorrection as the common place-name element -burn. Jobin is recorded as a given name in 13th-century Staffs but evidence of Jobin as a Staffs surname has not yet come to light.

Further information: Reaney speculates that Jobin might be a variant of Old French Jobert (see Joubert) with Middle English substitution of -bern for -bert, and draws the parallel of Middle English Ketelbern as an attested variant of Ketelbert. However, there is no medieval evidence for **Jobern*. It is worth noting that Jobert may have given rise to Jobber and the now extinct surnames Jobbard and Jobet which, like Jobborn, have a post-medieval Staffs distribution. Early bearers: William Joburne, 1615 in IGI (Stepney, Middx); John Joborne, 1649, Abrahami Jobourne, 1681 in IGI (Stafford, Staffs); Solomon Jobborn, 1756 in IGI (Whittington near Lichfield, Staffs); Moses Joborn, 1757 in IGI (Aldridge, Staffs); Thos. English: of uncertain origin; perhaps from Middle English juce, jouce (Old French jus), 'a liquid extract obtained by boiling herbs', although this seems an unlikely origin for a nickname, even for an apothecary, as suggested in Reaney and Wilson. Whatever its etymology, it is not certain that the medieval name has survived. Rare post-medieval examples of Jouce may be scribal errors for Joyce, while Juce is likely to be a mistaken transcription of Ince.

1 English: (i) relationship name principally from the Middle English and Old French personal name Joce, Josse, Joice, a Romance form of Old Breton Iudoc, a pet form of a name in Iuð- with the hypocoristic suffix -oc. Joce became popular as a given name, especially in medieval Picardy, Artois, Normandy, and Flanders, through the cult of Saint Josse.

According to legend, he was the brother or son of the 7th-century Breton king Judhael, and gave up his inheritance to become a hermit in the place recorded in the 8th century as Sanctus Jodocus, now Saint-Josse-sur-Mer, near Étaples in Pas-de-Calais. The cult was promoted in the second half of the 8th century by the Frankish king Charlemagne, and was brought to England (Winchester) in the early 10th century by refugees from Saint-Josse, the centre of the cult, but use of the given name in England is not known until after the Norman Conquest. Middle English Joce also was sometimes used as a female name (as Joyce is in modern times) and this may have also given rise to a surname. In Norman usage Joce was inextricably confused with the name in (ii) and some of the following early bearers may alternatively belong there. In their male forms both names could be latinized as Joceus and Jocius. (ii) sometimes a variant of Goss, from the Continental Germanic personal name Gozzo, Gauz, which often became Joce, Joice, Joss(e) in Old French. It was frequently used as a short form of Goscelin or Joscelin (see Joslin), as in Jose or Jocelinus de Baillol, 1164–6 in Bury Saint Edmunds Documents (Suffolk).

Further information: Two farms in Essex called Joyce's Farm derive respectively from Robert and John Joce (1353, 1398 in Place-Names of Essex, pp. 303, 309).

Early bearers: given names (male): Josce, Iocius, about 1140–50, Joce de Brunna, 1195 in Danelaw Documents (Lincs); Jorse or Joice, 1313, 1320 in London Letter Books D, E.

- Main GB location 1881: Sussex

Norman, English: relationship name from the Continental Germanic personal name Goldewin, which was introduced to England by Normans in their Old French forms Golduin, Goudwin (with a hard g), and Jolduin, Geldewin, Jeldwin, and Jeudwin (with a soft g). When pronounced with a hard g the surname was probably confused with the native English names Goldwin and Goodwin. When pronounced with a soft g, it may have been confused with Judden but no evidence has been found to derive this name from it, as Reaney supposed. The Sussex surname probably goes back to a single ancestor, the man of Norman descent named in the late 12th-century Pipe Rolls as Jeldewin or Joldewin son of Savari. In the late 17th or early 18th century the equivalent French surname Jeudwin(e) was brought to England by Huguenots such as Estienne Jeudwin, 1712 in IGI (Threadneedle Street French Huguenot, London), but this name seems to have died out since the 1881 census.

Further information: In post-Conquest records, Continental Germanic Goldewin is impossible to distinguish from Old English Goldwine (see Goldwin), except when it occurs as an alias of French pronunciations with initial J- for (hard) G-, or -ou- and -eu- for -ol-. Richard Goldwyne, recorded in Poling (Sussex) in the late 13th century, is therefore probably the same man as Richard Jeudewyn, recorded there in the early 14th century, while Ricardus Goudwyne, 1379 in Poll Tax (Pagham, Sussex) is probably related to William Goldewyne or Joldewyne, a 13th-century tenant of Pagham. See Surnames of Sussex, p. 338. Here may also belong William Goudwyne, 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (Tillington, Sussex), Walterus Goudwyne, 1379 in Poll Tax (Washington, Sussex), and Johanne Goudewyn', 1381 in Poll Tax (Haslemere, Surrey), but they could alternatively represent spellings of Godewin (see Goodwin).

Early bearers: given names: Iuldwyn, 1115–45 in Durham Liber Vitae; Jeldewinus, Joldewinus filius Savarici, 1157–8, 1158–9 in Pipe Rolls (Midhurst, Sussex).

English: possibly a nickname from the north-country adjective jump, a variant of the more widespread jimp 'neat, slender; tight (of clothing)'. But these are not recorded before the 19th century in England and OED implies they are originally Scots; English Dialect Dictionary is non-committal. A.H. Smith suggests that there may have been a north-country word jump denoting steep hills, exemplified in some Yorks place-names, of which the earliest is The Jumps in Todmorden, WR Yorks, and that, close to the Lancs boundary, is the most likely source.

- Further information: The spellings Joop and Joup indicate a lengthening and raising of the vowel in Middle English Jop(e) to /o:/. and by early Modern English to /u:/. This appears to be a dialect feature of Sussex, Hants, Dorset, and Wilts. See the additional evidence under Jupp, where variation in the same Sussex parishes between -o-, -oo-, and -ou- occurs widely. Compare Rubin, Sussex Dialect, pp. 148–54, and Survey of Middle English Dialects 4, pp. 67–81, although their interpretation of -ou- spellings differs from this.

- 2 English: nickname, occasionally perhaps from Middle English (Old French) jube, jupe 'long woollen garment for men', given to a maker or habitual wearer of such. For possible post-medieval bearers see (1), but the medieval spellings Jop(pe), Jope, and Joop, do not fit this explanation, which remains somewhat doubtful.

1 English, Scottish: relationship name from the male given name Juste (from Justus, Latin justus 'just'), rare in England, which gave rise to a hereditary surname near Ipswich in the 13th century.

Further information: Justus, the name of a 4th-century bishop of Lyons, gave rise to the French surnames Just, Juste, and Jux and the derivatives Juteau, Jutot (Dauzat). Some of the English bearers with an apparently suffixed name may really represent Justice.

Early bearers: given names: Justus de Thurlestun(e), 1216–72 in Ancient Deeds ii, iii (Suffolk). surnames: Gilebertus filius Juste, 1203 in Pipe Rolls (Lincs); Martin Justuse of Thurleston 1216–72 in Ancient Deeds ii, iii (Suffolk); Martin and Roger Justus of Thurlestone (brothers), 1292 in Ancient Deeds ii (Suffolk); Johannes Juste, 1379 in Poll Tax (Horning, Norfolk); Tho Just, 1547 in IGI (Norwich, Norfolk).

- Norman, English: nickname from Middle English juster(e) 'joust' (about 1400, MED; from Anglo-Norman French justour, Old French justeor, justeur 'joust').

Further information: To give young knights practice in deeds of arms and their elders excitement, tournaments or jousts were held. They sprang up in France in the 12th century and were popular with the Anglo-Norman knights. These early tournaments were very rough affairs, in every sense, quite unlike the chivalrous contests of later days; the rival parties fought in groups, and it was considered not only fair but commendable to hold off until you saw some of your adversaries getting tired and then to join in the attack on them; the object was not to break a lance in the most approved style, but frankly to disable as many opponents as possible for the sake of obtaining their horses, arms, and ransoms.' William the Marshal, later Earl of Pembroke and regent of England during the minority of Henry III, the most brilliant jousting of his day, 'made a very good income out of his tournaments' (Salzman, Life, p. 202).

Scottish, English: occupational name from Middle English justice, justis(e) 'judicial officer; judge' (Old French justise, justice 'uprightness; equity; vindication of right; court of justice; judge'). Compare William Justyse then constable, 1253 in Lewes Chartulary (Norfolk). Sometimes it may be a shortening of or metonym for Old French justiceor: John, Tiphina le Justiser, 1322 in Ancient Deeds vi (Devon). According to Reaney, the variation between le and la in the evidence may point to the use of the abstract noun justice. More likely la Justice is a reduced form of Anglo-Norman French de la Justice 'of the court of justice', just as la Waite for de la Waite 'of the watch'; see Waite.

Further information: Weekley, p. 221, note, suggested that such abstract-noun names as Verity, Mercy or Marcy, Justice, and Peace may derive from their use as character names in medieval mystery plays such as the Chester cycle; but this is uncertain.

Early bearers: England: William la Justis, cent. in 12th Ancient Deeds iii (Suffolk); Thomas Justic', 1202 in Assize Rolls (Lincs); Robert la justice, 1220 in Saint Bartholomew's Hospital Cartulary (London); Peter, Roger le Justice, 1255 in Hundred Rolls (Shrops); Johanne Justice, 1381 in Poll Tax (Steventon, Berks); William Justes or Justyce, 1521 in PROB 11 (Reading, Berks); George Justisse, 1562 in IGI (Hurworth on Tees, Durham); Doryty Justis, 1570 in IGI (Eastry, Kent); Hannah Jestice, 1781 in IGI (Goodworth Clatford, Hants).

(ii) from the first element of Kang Ju (康居), the name of a state in Central Asia during the Western Han dynasty (206 BC–AD 25). People from this state adopted 康 as their surname. Immigrants from Samarkand in China acquired 康, the Chinese name of their state, as their surname, known as one of the ‘Nine Sogdian Surnames’. (iv) adopted in place of another Chinese surname, 匡 (see Hong (4)). Some people with the surname 匡 changed their surname to 康 during the reign of Zhao Kuangyin (赵匡胤), known as Song Tai Zu (AD 927–976), the first emperor of the Northern Song dynasty (AD 960–1127), because 匡 happened to be part of the given name of the emperor, which was taboo in ancient China.

(ii) from the second element of the personal name Zu Geng (祖庚), one of the kings of the Shang dynasty (1600–1046 BC). 4 Chinese: Mandarin form of the Chinese surname 亢 (Kong in Cantonese romanization), meaning ‘high’ or ‘haughty’ in Chinese: (i) from the first element of the place-name Kang Fu (亢父), the name of a vassal state (in present-day Jining in Shandong province) in the state of Qi during the Spring and Autumn period (770–476 BC). (ii) adopted in place of another Chinese surname, 抗 (Kang in Mandarin pinyin), also sharing the same origin of another two Chinese surnames 抗 (Kang in Mandarin pinyin) and 杭 (pronounced the same as 抗 in ancient Chinese, Hang in today’s Mandarin pinyin, Hong in Cantonese romanization), which can be traced back to San Kang (三伉/抗/杭), a noble official in the state of Wei (卫) during the Spring and Autumn period (770–476 BC).

7 Korean: (姜; Chinese character 姜). Borne by the descendants of Kang I-shik (姜以式), a military official in the ancient Koguryō kingdom. Kang I-shik valiantly defended the Koguryō kingdom against invasions from China. Subsequently, his descendant, Kang Chin (姜縉), was enfeoffed with Chinju in Kyōngsang South Province. Chinju henceforth became the clan seat for the Kang family.

8 Korean: (姜; Chinese character 康). This surname is borne by the descendants of Kang Ho-kyōng (康虎景). His 14th-generation descendant, Kang Chi-yōn (康之淵) attended the Koryō king Kojong when he fled to Kanghwa Island during the Mongol invasions. Kang Chi-yōn was subsequently enfeoffed with Shinch’ōn in Hwanghae Province. There are two other clans of this Kang family, but both descend from Kang Chi-yōn.

1 English: (i) nickname from Middle English kei, ka 'left-handed' or 'clumsy' (Old Scandinavian kei 'left-handed'). The word, in the sense 'left (hand or foot)', survived in Lancs and Cheshire dialect until at least the 19th century, and must formerly have been widespread in counties further south. Compare Thomas Kafot, 1185 in Templars Records (Lincs), Matilda Cafot, 1319 in Subsidy Rolls (London), Willelmus Cayfote, 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (Worcs), John Kayfot, 1327 in Subsidy Rolls (Thornbury, Gloucs), and the 1296 Sussex example le Kay cited below. For the spelling key, note the translation of French gauchier as 'left-handed, key-fisted' in Cotgrave's Dictionary of French and English Tongues (1611). (ii) nickname from northern Middle English ka, kae, kay 'jackdaw' (Old Scandinavian ká). Reaney, Dictionary notes that in York Freeman's Register the surname occurs as Kaa (1433) and Caa (1461), and is apparently interchangeable with Cay and Kay. This derivation is restricted to the northern counties and perhaps N Lincs, for in the Midlands and southern English counties ka became co(o) by the 13th century (see Coe). It is probably also not a source of Key(es), unless by confusion with (i). (iii) nickname, occasionally perhaps from Middle English kai(e), kei(e) 'key', applied to a maker of keys (compare Kear), or alluding to the office of keeper or bearer of keys, but clear evidence for this is wanting.
