In higher courts, the argument for each side is usually presented by a barrister. In Scotland, a barrister is usually called an advocate.

lay

- 1. VERB AND NOUN USES 动词和名词用法
- 2. ADJECTIVE USES 形容词用法

In standard English, the form lay is also the past tense of the verb lie in some meanings. In informal English, people sometimes use the word lay instead of lie in those meanings.

在标准英语中, lay亦作动词lie某些义项的过去式。而在非正式英语中, 人们有时用lay来代替这些义项中的lie。

Usage Note :

Do not confuse the verb lay with the verb lie. Because lay is used to talk about putting something in a particular place or position, it is related to the verb lie. If someone lays something somewhere, it lies there. The past tense and past participle of lay are both laid and it is usually a transitive verb. They laid him on the floor. However, lie is an intransitive verb with the past tense lay and the past participle lain. I lay on the floor with my legs in the air.

不要混淆lie与lay这两个动词的用法。lay表示将某物放在某处或某个位置, 意义上与动词lie有相关之处。某人将某物放(lay)在某处, 那该物就放(lie)在那里。lie的过去式是lay, 过去分词是lain, 为不及物动词, 如: I lay on the floor with my legs in the air (我躺在地上, 双腿抬起)。而lay的过去式和过去分词均为laid, 通常作及物动词, 如: They laid him on the floor (他们把他放在地上)。

Usage Note :

You can use the adjective little to talk about things that are small. ...a little house. ...little children. However, little is not normally used to emphasize or draw attention to the fact that something is small. For instance, you do not usually say 'The town is little' or 'I have a very little car', but you can say 'The town is small' or 'I have a very small car'. Little is a less precise word than small, and may be used to suggest the speaker's feelings or attitude towards the person or thing being described. For that reason, little is often used after another adjective. What a nice little house you've got here!... Shut up, you horrible little boy! Little and a little are both used as determiners in front of uncount nouns, but they do not have the same meaning. For example, if you say 'I have a little money', this is a positive statement and you are saying that you have some money. However, if you say 'I have little money', this is a negative statement and you are saying that you have almost no money.

little作形容词时表示“小的”，如：a little house (小房子)，little children (小孩子)。但little一般不用于强调某物之小，如通常不会说The town is little或I have a very little car,但可以说The town is small (这个城镇很小)或I have a very small car (我有一辆很小的汽车)。little不如small精确，而且可用于表示说话人对于所谈论的人或物的感情或态度。因而，little常跟在另一个形容词之后，如：What a nice little house you've got here (你这小房子真漂亮啊)，Shut up, you horrible little boy (闭嘴，你这个讨厌的小家伙)。little和a little都可用作限定词修饰不可数名词，但其含义不同。例如，I have a little money (我有一点钱)是肯定陈述，表示有一些钱，而I have little money (我没什么钱)是否定陈述，表示几乎没钱。

The comparative littler and the superlative littlest are sometimes used in spoken English for meanings 1, 3, and 4, but otherwise the comparative and superlative forms of the adjective little are not used.

口语中义项1、3、4有时用比较级littler和最高级littlest，但除此之外little作形容词时都不用比较级和最高级。

Baggage is a more technical word and is used for example when discussing airports or travel insurance. In American English, luggage refers to empty bags and suitcases and baggage refers to bags and suitcases with their contents. Both British and American speakers can refer to everything that travellers carry as their bags.

American speakers can also call an individual suitcase a bag.

luggage为不可数名词，可以说 a piece of luggage 或 some luggage，但不能说 a luggage 或 some luggages。英国英语一般用luggage来指旅行者携带的所有东西，而 baggage 则是一个较为专业的用语，用于有关机场或旅行保险等话题中。在美国英语中，luggage 指空的包和手提箱，而 baggage 则指包和手提箱及其中的物品。英国英语和美国英语中均可以用 bags 来指旅行者携带的所有东西。美国英语还可以用 bag 来指单个手提箱。
