The Focus of This Lesson is Where to Put Time Words in Cantonese

我今朝遲到

"I was late this morning."

In Cantonese, we generally put time words at the start of sentences before the main verb of our sentences. This lets us know right away whether we are talking about something that will happen tonight, tomorrow, or something that happened yesterday. If there is a subject in the sentence, we can put the time word either immediately before or immediately after the subject. For an example, consider the sentence 今日我去街, gam1 jat6 ngo5 heoi3 gaai1 ("Today, I go shopping"). The word for "today" (今日) is placed right at the beginning of our sentence, even before the subject (我). For more examples, consider the following
