總之,那個角落,散發濃濃的肉香。我打交道最多的是麵包店的師傅,每天早上睡過頭,急匆匆的衝進他的店裡,常常不記得拿麵包就跑。他話很少,也不熱情,跟又鬆又軟的麵包們很不相稱。只是去的多了,每次進門,他就給我拿個腸仔包,15秒叮熱,又快又好的完成跟我毫不囉嗦的交易。兩個興致闌珊的人,習慣的默契卻也有了一絲人情味。

每到晚上或者周末,我家後面的球場就會有一堆30,40歲的男人瘋狂的踢球,激情肆意,風雨無阻。 開始的時候不明白他們何處來的力氣。後來走在中環的時候多了,就知道那低頭不語的日子有多壓抑,那片草地是唯一自由靈魂的寄託。所以,即使他們上了年紀,有了肚腩,禿了頭,在球場上,他們還是像以前一樣使勁全力的衝啊跳啊叫啊。午夜的時候,散了場的他們也會在7-11買兩支啤酒吹吹水,討論去哪裡宵夜。珍惜這身邊不多的老友,很少的屬於自己的時光。一切,真的就像古巨基的經典金曲《友共情》一樣——難忘球場上那可愛片斷,突然又已一年,期望再會面,舊朋友,就算身已遙遠,但往昔未變…

English

The fragrant smell of meat poured out from that street corner. The baker was the person I talked with the most. Every morning when I overslept, I'd rush into his bakery and then leave without taking my bread. The baker didn't talk much and didn't seem very passionate, something that created a sharp contrast between himself and his fluffy bread. I would visit him time and again, and each time he would pack me a sausage bun and reheat it for fifteen seconds. The deal between us was fast and clear. Although we were both dispirited in a way, we developed a sort of tacit understanding laced with what you might call a feeling of human kindness.

In the evenings and on the weekends, crowds of thirty to forty year old men would gather on the soccer field behind my house to play crazily. They would throw their passion into the game even on rainy nights. When they started, I didn't know why they had such a fervor for the game. Then after walking down Central day after day, I started to understand how depressingly some days can be spent. That patch of grass is the only place that they can entrust their soul. Which is why, even though they aren't young anymore – some have big bellies and are starting to go bald – they still jump, shout, and run like young kids. And when they break up at midnight, they'll often go to the 7-11 to buy some beers, chat, and talk about where to grab a late-night snack.

You don't have to do much to treasure old friendship. It's just like a song called "Friendship Together" by Leo Ku Kui Kei. It's hard to forget the scoreboard on the soccer field, ticking away the years one-by-one as they pass. And even if your friends are far away, you still want to see them in spite of the distance.
