Grammar Points

The Focus of this Lesson is a Cantonese Way of Asking for Favors

同我攞杯威士忌，落三粒冰。

"Bring me a glass of whiskey with three ice cubes."

Our grammar point today involves looking at a new usage for an old and familiar word: 同 (tung4). In previous lessons we learned that this is usually a preposition, which means we put it in front of verbs to modify the scope of that verb. For example, in the sentence 我同佢一齊去食飯 ("we're going eating together ") our preposition 同 is used like the word "with" in English. This is also what we see in the question 同佢去香港 ("are you going to Hong Kong with her")?

In this lesson we run into another usage of 同, where the character is used to ask someone for help doing something. In our dialogue, we run into this when our second speaker says 同我擺杯威士忌 ("bring me a glass of whiskey"). Here 同 is being used for in the sense of doing something "for" someone. This is a more subtle usage of the character, which we can also see in the following two examples:

1. 同我擺杯雞尾酒。
Bring me a cocktail.
2. 記得同佢買支威士忌。
Remember to help him buy a bottle of whiskey.

Don't forget that there is another word we can use which expresses the same meaning as 同 in Cantonese. This word is 幫, as in the request 幫我擺杯葡萄酒 ("bring me a glass of wine").

Hong Kong Nightlife

Looking for a place to hang out with friends in Hong Kong? Options we recommend include Soho on Hollywood Road (荷里活道). This is one of the best places to have dinner or a drink, and it becomes especially busy during the summer and on weekends. And if you miss Western culture, there is a popular bar there called the 1911 Club, which is an Irish pub specializing in Guinness and whiskey.

Compared to those on Hollywood Road, bars in the Kowloon area are more economical. Although the prices are cheaper, bars and clubs are popular among young people in Hong Kong. Ned Kelley's Last Stand is widely considered the most popular because of its wonderful jazz band. Others who want to spend a magnificent night enjoying the beautiful view of Victoria Harbor can check out Felix in The Peninsula (半島酒店), which has the most impressive restroom we've ever seen in Hong Kong. There is also the Sky Lounge in the Sheraton Hong Kong Hotel & Towers (香港喜來登酒店) and Lobby Lounge in the
