Quick Tip

The Internet is ubiquitous in Hong Kong. There is no need to go to Internet cafes since the local telecom company offers wireless Internet at a competitive price. PDAs, Blackberrys, and iPhones are all heavily used by the majority of Hong Kongers. Whether on the street, on the bus, or in a restaurant, you can access fast Wi-Fi. A competitive telecommunication market ensures that customers will see fast Internet at affordable prices. Companies PCCW and 3 offer rates to access the Internet from twenty HKD a day to a monthly plan costing one hundred and thirty HKD a day.
