Editor's intro

Hi, and welcome to another issue of Hot English Magazine, the fun magazine for learning English. First of all, we'd like to welcome any Hot English students to their new course. We know you'll learn a lot and we really hope you enjoy the classes – we're sure you will!

Well, we've got a great magazine for you this month: learn how to dance (in English), how to use phrasal verbs with time, how to talk about your house, how to identify your body organs, how to talk about jobs, how to use compound nouns, how to make Guinness stew and lots, lots more.

Plus, read about a controversial French designer, a US senator, an American gangster, a new film release, some dangerous animals from the UK, a new initiative by the Queen, a television series, a hero from the past, a controversial lawsuit and lots, lots more.

Well, if that isn't enough for you this month, you'll just have to wait until next month for even more!

Good luck with your English language learning and we'll see you all next month.

Yours,
Andy

READING

Work for Free

Radical measures to deal with the recession.

PRE-INTERMEDIATE (A2) READING I

1 Pre-reading

ANSWERS ON PAGE 45

Match the airlines (1 to 6) to the countries (a-f).

1. Qantas
2. British Airways
3. Aeroflot
4. Iberia
5. KLM
6. Lufthansa

- a. Russia
- b. Germany
- c. Spain
- d. Australia
- e. Holland
- f. UK

2 Reading I

How many words related to air travel can you think of? Try to add 6 more words to the list: passenger, ticket, pilot...

Now, read the article and check your ideas. How many airline-related words can you find?

3 Reading II

Read the article again and write yes or no next to each question.

1. Are sales at British Airways down?
2. Is BA a good company to work for?
3. Does the company pay its workers well?
4. Is the company trying to increase costs?
5. Are they asking staff to take paid holidays?
6. Is the CEO going to take unpaid leave?

4 Language focus Superlatives

Look at this sentence from the article, "These are the toughest trading conditions we have ever seen." What is the superlative form in this sentence? How do we form it? Make superlatives with these adjectives.

1. It is the _____ (good) film I have seen.
2. It is the _____ (hard) exam I have ever done.
3. It is the _____ (nice) song I have ever heard.

5 Discussion

1. Would you ever work for free? Why? Why not?
2. What's your favourite / least favourite airline? Why?
3. How often do you travel by air? Where do you go?
4. What do you like to do while you are travelling by air?

IT'S THE LEAST I COULD DO.

Things aren't easy for a lot of companies these days. Sales are down and costs are rising as a result of the economic recession. But one British company thinks it has found a solution.

British Airways (BA) is certainly a good company to work for. They pay their cabin crew a lot more than rival airlines. The average salary for cabin crew (including bonuses and allowances) is £29,900. This is compared with £14,400 and £20,200 at other airlines. BA's pilots earn a lot too. The average salary is £107,600, compared with £89,500 and £71,400 at rival companies.

But things aren't going too well. BA made a record £401 million loss in 2008. This was due to rising fuel prices and a drop in premium-fare passengers. Now the company is trying to reduce costs. They are talking about dropping pay, cutting jobs and asking for voluntary retirement. But one of their measures is more controversial.

BA executives have asked staff to take unpaid holiday. "It is a fight for survival," said a spokesperson for the company. "These are the toughest trading conditions we have ever seen. Our survival depends on everyone contributing to changes. I am looking for every single part of the company to take part in some way," the spokesperson added. The CEO of British Airways, Willie Walsh, has said that he will take unpaid leave. But will others follow his example? *

Salad Days

Salads rival Big Macs for fat.

1 Pre-reading

ANSWERS ON PAGE 45

Match the food (1 to 6) to the images (a-f).

1. Hamburger
2. Fries
3. Salad
4. Chicken nuggets
5. Soft drink
6. Mayonnaise

Are you concerned about what you eat? If you are, then you should be reading the information on food labels carefully... very carefully.

Just imagine the scene. You're in a supermarket. You're looking for something light and healthy. So, you ignore all the fried food, TV dinners and fatty goods and go for a pre-packed salad. But is that really the best option? According to a recent report, some supermarket salads have more calories and fat than a Big Mac and fries.

Researchers from Which? magazine looked at 20 salads. At least two had more fat than a standard McDonald's meal. In fact, many of them had more than the recommended daily intake of fat. One salad, the Atlantic Prawn Marie Rose Salad, contained 855 calories and 66.3g of fat – nearly half of a woman's recommended daily energy intake of calories and nearly all of the fat. In comparison, a Big Mac and medium fries contains 820 calories and 40g of the fat. Another salad, the Pasta with Tomato & Basil Chicken, contained 760 calories and 46g of fat.

Part of the problem is the misleading food labels. One salad claimed to have no mayonnaise. However, the salad dressing in the product contained egg yolk, oil and white wine vinegar – the same ingredients as mayonnaise! Another salad – the Tuna Layered Salad – only appeared to have 275 calories and 20.5g of fat, but this information was only referring to half the pack. So, next time you're looking for something light and healthy, remember to read the food information label... and then read it again, just to make sure. ✪

2 Reading I

The article is about some salads that contain more fat than hamburgers. Read the article once and find evidence for this.

3 Reading II

Read the article again and say what the numbers refer to.

1. 20
2. 855
3. 40g
4. 760 calories
5. 275 calories

4 Language focus Adjectives and prepositions

Look at this extract from the article,

"...the same ingredients as mayonnaise!"

Notice how we say "the same as". What prepositions do we use with these adjectives?

1. It is different _____ the other one.
2. It is similar _____ that one.
3. This number is equal _____ that one.

5 Discussion

1. Do you ever eat pre-packed salads? Which ones? Why?
2. Do you eat out at fast food restaurants much? Where? How often?
3. What's your favourite fast food restaurant?

Recommended daily intake

Men - calories: 2500, fat: 95g

House Museums

THE UK IS FAMOUS FOR MUSEUMS SUCH AS THE TATE MODERN, THE NATIONAL HISTORY MUSEUM AND THE BRITISH MUSEUM. BUT THERE ARE HUNDREDS OF OTHER LESSER-KNOWN MUSEUMS THAT ARE EQUALLY FASCINATING. AND MANY MUSEUMS ARE ACTUALLY IN THE HOUSES WHERE THE FAMOUS PERSON ONCE LIVED. HERE ARE SOME OF THE BEST HOUSE MUSEUMS IN THE UK.

House museums are in a special category of their own. For a start, they give you a fascinating insight into the life of the famous person. You can see where they lived, how they lived and where they created some of their finest works. Sir John Soane's Museum in London is a great example of a house museum. Sir John lived in London during the 18th century (1753-1837) and his house is exactly as he left it. In fact, visiting the house is just like stepping back in time. It's full of thousands of weird and wonderful objects from around the world, including valuable paintings, beautiful sculptures and an Egyptian mummy.

The Dickens House Museum is in honour of the famous English writer, Charles Dickens. It is in the town of Broadstairs, Kent, which Dickens regularly visited. There are numerous personal artefacts and documents (including many letters) in exhibit rooms. The town also has an annual Dickens Festival, which takes place in June. During the festival, townspeople dress up in Victorian clothing. There are exhibitions, parades, theatre plays and musicians.

Some contemporary artists open their homes as house museums, too. Ted Coney has created an art gallery at his home in Ely, England. He's been painting for over forty years. His collection consists of a group of forty paintings on the theme of family life and relationships. Some of the topics include a daughter's marriage, the birth of a first grandchild, family anniversaries, marriages, bicycle tours by the artist, and dark family secrets. Most of the paintings are oil on canvas, although there are some examples of painting on glass, wood and Ivorene.

So, the next time you go to England, why not visit a house museum? ★

Musical Mania

Controversial music stars in the spotlight. By Emma Weinbren

1 Pre-reading

Match the musicians (1 to 6) to the photos (a-f).

1. David Bowie
2. Elton John
3. Freddie Mercury
4. Amy Winehouse
5. Liam Gallagher
6. Aimée Ann Duffy

2 Reading I

What do you know about Liam Gallagher and Amy Winehouse? Why are they famous? Why are they in the news so often? Think, then read the text to check your ideas.

3 Reading II

Read the article again and write L (for Liam) or A (for Amy) next to each sentence.

1. ...is the lead singer of Oasis.
2. ...has a brother called Noel.
3. ...sings R&B and soul.
4. ...is one of the best-selling female solo artists today.
5. ...has a song called "Rehab".
6. ...likes Manchester City.

4 Language focus Contractions

Look at this sentence from the article: "He's 178 cm tall." "He's" is the contracted form of "He is". Write the full forms for the following contracted forms.

1. He's got brown hair.
2. ...if you've got a brother...
3. They're just tired...
4. She's famous for...
5. She's got a waxwork at...

5 Discussion

1. Do you know any songs by these musicians? Which ones do you like?
2. Who is your favourite musician? Why?
3. Why are some musicians so controversial?
4. Who are the most controversial musicians in your country? What are they famous for?

Liam Gallagher

(21st September 1972)

Liam Gallagher is the lead singer of the British band Oasis. He sings and plays the guitar and the keyboards for the group. His favourite football team is Manchester City, he has a son called Lennon (named after the singer John Lennon) and he's of Irish descent. He's 178cm tall, he's got brown hair and blue eyes, his zodiac sign is Virgo... and he's often in the news.

Liam once said of U2, "They don't seem like normal people." And he has a long-standing feud with singer Robbie Williams. In 2000, during a music awards ceremony, Robbie asked, "Does anybody want to see me fight Liam?" Like many stars, Liam sometimes comes across as arrogant. "There's Elvis and me. I couldn't say which of the two is best," he once said.

Liam's most difficult relationship is with his brother and band mate, Noel Gallagher. "Everyone knows that if you've got a brother, you're going to fight," Liam once said. "Sure I love Noel, but not as much as I love Pot Noodles," he added.

Just recently, Noel announced that he would never play with his brother again. But their mum seems to think differently. "They're just tired at the end of the tour," she said. "They've had fights before and got over it. The funny thing is they didn't fight as children. They didn't fight until they started the band."

Amy Winehouse

(14th September 1983)

Amy Winehouse is another famous British pop star. Her full name is Amy Jade Winehouse and she's an R&B / soul singer and songwriter. She's got a waxwork at Madame Tussaud's, tattoos of naked women all over her body and a trademark beehive haircut. She's ranked 50th in NME's "Cool list".

Her most famous album is "Back to Black". It came out in 2006 and became the best-selling album of 2007. She has won many awards for her music, and she's famous for her soulful voice and distinctive music style. With international hits such as "Rehab", she's one of the best-selling female solo artists today.

But Amy is another star who is often in the news... and not always because of her music. One of the big stories was her divorce from Blake Fielder-Civil after just two years of marriage. She also has a lot of problems with drugs and alcohol. She often walks out of concerts, and sometimes gets booed by the crowd. A music critic once wrote about one of her concerts that ended badly, "It was one of the saddest nights of my life." In one of her most famous songs, "Rehab", she sings, "I don't ever wanna drink again, I just, oh, I just need a friend." Let's hope she finds that friend. ♡

IN THIS DIALOGUE, BEN AND JENNA ARE TALKING ABOUT JOBS.

- Ben: So, what do you do?
Jenna: I'm a chef in a hotel restaurant.
Ben: Oh, that's interesting. Did you go to a catering college?
Jenna: Yes, I studied there for three years. Then, I got a job in an Italian restaurant.
Ben: Wow!
Jenna: What about you? What do you do?
Ben: Well, I went to acting school. I want to be an actor, but I don't have any work at the moment. So, I'm working as a bartender at night and I'm a cleaner and painter during the day.
Jenna: Poor you.
Ben: Yes, it's pretty tiring. I go to auditions when I can. I really want to get a part in a TV series.
Jenna: Good luck.
Ben: Thanks, I need it. ☺

Airlines use funny stories to get some free advertising.

What's the best way for an airline to get free advertising? Simple! Create a story and make sure it gets in the news.

There have been a number of funny stories in the news about airlines over the past few years. And not many of them have turned out to be genuine. In November 2006, China Southern Airlines announced that it was going to limit passengers to just one visit to the toilet per flight. Much later, Ryanair said that it was going to charge passengers one pound for a visit to the bathroom.

In 1999, Virgin Airlines said that several planes would have "love beds" fitted in them for "amorous" passengers. In another attempt to grab attention, Southwest Airlines said its in-flight safety briefing would be an 80-second rap. Mistral Air, an airline chartered by the Vatican, said it was going to offer vials of Holy Water to Catholic pilgrims who were travelling to holy sites. Shortly afterwards, a German travel company announced that it would launch a flight for nudists. Another German company promised to become the first airline for smokers. And finally, Ryanair said they were considering a special tax for obese passengers.

So far, none of the ideas have been put into practice, but we've had a lot of fun reading about them... and the airlines have had their free advertising. ✪

compound nouns

In English, we can join words to create compound nouns. For example, we can put "horse" and "race" together to form "horse race" (a race with horses). As you can see, the second word (race) is the main word; the first word (horse) describes the second one and defines what type of "race" it is. Here are some more examples. Notice how some words join together to form one word, others are separated by a hyphen (-), and others are two separate words:

- a) Toothpaste = I put some toothpaste on my toothbrush.
- b) Marketing department = She works in the marketing department.
- c) Swimming pool = I went swimming in the swimming pool.
- d) Ice cream = This ice cream is delicious.
- e) Haircut = I had a haircut yesterday.
- f) Check-in = Check-in for the flight is two hours before departure time.
- g) Full moon = There was a full moon last night.

Remember, when you want to make the plural form, just add the "s" to the second noun (not the first one). For example: marketing departments; swimming pools; ice creams; full moons, etc.

1 Exercise

Complete the sentences with the words from below.

whiteboard, dining room, police officer, output, driving licence, printer cartridge

A Bridget too Far?

A third Bridget Jones film may be one too many.

1 Pre-reading

Match the female film characters (1 to 7) to their corresponding pictures (a-g). Which films were they in?

1. Erin Brockovich
2. Scarlett O'Hara
3. Sister Maria
4. Dorothy
5. Bridget Jones
6. Cruella de Vil
7. Princess Leia

2 Reading I

What do you know about the Bridget Jones films? What are the stories about? Read the article to check your ideas.

3 Reading II

Read the article again and complete the information. Write "1" (the first Bridget Jones film), "2" (the second Bridget Jones film) and "3" (the third Bridget Jones film).

1. She wants to have a baby.
2. She decides to keep a diary.
3. She's in her forties.
4. She thinks her boyfriend is having an affair.
5. She gets arrested.
6. She decides to take control of her life.
7. Mark flies out to help her.

4 Language focus Storytelling

What tenses do we generally use to describe film plots in English? Look over the article again and find examples of:

1. The Present Simple.
2. The Present Simple Continuous
3. The Present Simple Passive

5 Discussion

1. Who's your favourite female movie character? What do you like about her?
2. Do you know of any other famous trilogies? Which one is your favourite?
3. What's the most ridiculous film you've ever seen? Why was it so bad?

Scatty singleton Bridget Jones is back again for a third film. This time, she's older and has a whole new set of problems. But do we really need another Bridget Jones?

In the latest film, Bridget is no longer single. In fact, she has married the "man of her dreams", Mark Darcy, and seems to have everything she ever wanted. The problem? Now in her forties, Bridget is desperate to have a child. Just to complicate matters, her ex, Daniel Cleaver, is back. All in all, a recipe for disaster. But the big question now is whether Bridget's disasters are still entertaining. Many critics are not convinced.

The first Bridget Jones film, Bridget Jones's Diary (2001), was a big hit. Bridget Jones (Renée Zellweger) played the role of an ordinary woman struggling against her age, her weight and her lack of love. As a part of her New Year's Resolution, Bridget decides to take control of her life and promises to keep a diary. But things aren't going to be easy. She's in love with a reserved, stuffy lawyer, Mark Darcy (Colin Firth), but starts a relationship with her boss, Daniel Cleaver (played by Hugh Grant). The film has many hilarious scenes and was a huge hit at the box office.

The second film, Bridget Jones: The Edge of Reason (2004), didn't do so well. The story picks up four weeks after the first film. Bridget Jones is becoming uncomfortable in her relationship with Mark Darcy. She's convinced that Mark is having an affair with his attractive intern. After a series of incidents, Bridget leaves Mark and goes to Thailand with Daniel Cleaver to film "The Smooth Guide". However, Bridget gets involved in an international incident and is arrested. Daniel abandons her, but Mark comes to the rescue. The film is funny, but not quite as funny as the first one.

Some think the third film could be a flop. For many, the idea of a woman trying to have a baby doesn't sound like a good basis for a comedy. Unlike Bridget's dating dilemmas, this is not a subject that everyone can relate to. Others feel that Bridget Jones is someone outdated. In a recent debate on the British chat show Loose Women participants discussed whether the character really reflects what women are like nowadays. They were critical of the fact that Bridget Jones never seems to be happy on her own; whereas the men are.

Author Helen Fielding maintains that the "Bridget Jones dilemma" is common in modern day society. "There are so many advertisements now telling people they need to look a certain way and have this perfect life," explains Fielding. "That's why Bridget struck such a chord with women, because she is human and she has these flaws which most of us have." So, is Bridget a modern-day icon or an outdated stereotype? The next Bridget Jones film is due out in 2011. Whether it will be a hit or not remains to be seen. ✪

5 Discussion

1. Have you ever had a frightening experience with an animal?
2. What dangerous animals are there in your country?
3. Do you go to the country very often? What do you do there?

ANSWERS ON PAGE 45

England is relatively safe when it comes to animals and wildlife. There are no lions, elephants or tigers, or any dangerous spiders and deadly snakes. But there are a lot of cows.

No image of the British countryside would be complete without a cow. In fact, there are more than ten million of them in the UK. With their sad, beautiful eyes, their slow walk and harmless appearance they are a key part of the landscape. But they do have another side to their character. And given that they can weigh more than 500kg, this can be a bit of a problem.

In recent weeks, there have been two high-profile attacks by cows. A fortnight ago a cow attacked former government minister, David Blunkett. He ended up with a black eye and a cracked rib. In another attack, a vet was trampled by cattle. She was walking with her two dogs. In both cases, experts believe the cows were trying to protect their young from dogs.

But these aren't isolated incidents. Health and Safety Executive figures show that 18 people have been killed and 481 injured by cows in the past eight years. "Spring and early summer are when cows feel most vulnerable," a spokesperson explained. "We hear of one or two incidents each week, but these don't usually involve serious injuries."

So, what can you do if you're confronted by an angry cow? "The best advice is to keep calm and carry on," an animal expert explained. "If you find yourself in a field of cattle, move away as carefully and quietly as possible. And above all, keep dogs close and on a leash. And if the cows charge, let go of the leash – the cows are more interested in the dog than you."

So, next time you go for a walk in the English countryside, watch out for cows... especially if you're walking your dog! ☘

Cow trivia

A cow is a mature female. "Cattle" refers to animals from the whole "cow" family (cows, bulls, etc.). A bull is an adult male cow. An ox is a castrated adult bull. Every day, a cow drinks about a bathtub full of water and around 20 kilos of food.

You can lead a cow upstairs but not downstairs – a cow's knees cannot bend properly to walk down. The UK is the 9th largest milk producer in the world and the 3rd largest in Europe.

Basic Anatomy

What we know and don't know about the human body.

Body Organs

Here is a very basic description of the major organs.

The heart is located on the left side behind your chest bone. The heart circulates blood throughout the body.

The spleen is located under the left rib cage, beneath the stomach. The spleen filters, stores and cleans the blood.

The stomach receives food from the oesophagus, stores it, and then empties the food into the duodenum, the beginning section of the small intestine.

The pancreas is located behind the stomach. The pancreas manufactures pancreatic juice, which aids digestion when fed into the small intestine.

The lungs mix blood with oxygen, and expel used air, carbon dioxide and other toxins.

The kidneys are located above the waist in the back. The kidneys filter all the fluids, removing excess water and unneeded by products of the body's many chemical reactions.

The liver stores large quantities of blood, minerals and vitamins. The gall bladder is located under the liver. It stores bile until it is needed in the small intestine for digestion.

GLOSSARY

- an outline n
the basic shape of something with no detail/colour, etc.
- a shaded area n
an area that has been coloured darker than the other areas
- to take part n
to participate in
- to undergo treatment n
to take medicine or to have a medical operation as part of a cure
- a survey n
a series of questions asked to people in order to find out information
- to conduct vb
if you "conduct" a survey, you organise it and do it
- barely changed exp
if something has "barely changed", it hasn't changed much
- to lead to exp
to cause; to result in
- to avoid vb
if you "avoid" something, you make sure it doesn't happen
- a hospitalisation n
if there is a "hospitalisation", someone is sent to hospital

4 Language focus: Contrasting ideas

Look at this sentence from the article, "However, Ellen Mason of the British Heart Foundation said..." We use the word "however" to contrast ideas. Make two sentences from the sentence below using "however" to contrast the ideas.

"They said they didn't like the car, but they bought it anyway."

5 Discussion

1. What do you do to look after your body?
2. Do you think it's important to know where your body organs are? Why? Why not?
3. What can we do to stay fit and healthy?

Do you know where your heart is? What about your kidneys and your liver? If you don't, you aren't alone according to a recent study.

As part of the study, more than 700 people were asked to look at outlines of a male and female body. They had to identify several shaded areas, which represented a particular organ. Two groups of people took part in the study: healthy members of the public, and those undergoing treatment for a problem that affected an organ. More than 50% of those with kidney problems did not know where the kidneys were. However, liver patients did better, with 75.3% identifying the organ compared with 46% of the general population. Only 30% of the general population placed the lungs in their correct location. Surprisingly, more than 85% got the intestines right.

Many healthcare professionals are disappointed with the results. "Public understanding of basic anatomy has not improved since a similar survey was conducted 40 years ago," a researcher explained. "In fact, the results have barely changed. Since then, there have been significant improvements in education, as well as an increased media focus on medical topics and growing access to the internet as a source of medical information. We thought this would lead to better results, but it hasn't."

But how important is all this? "If people are going to use the NHS in an effective way, they need to be able to communicate and understand what is said to them – this way we avoid unnecessary hospitalisations," said Don Redding, the head of a patient research group. However, Ellen Mason of the British Heart Foundation said, "Ideally the public would have a better knowledge of the location of their major body organs than this study suggests. However, it is ultimately more important to know how to look after your heart than where it is in your body." 🌟

Public Enemy Number One

TO SOME HE WAS A RUTHLESS CRIMINAL. TO OTHERS, HE WAS A CHARISMATIC HERO. JOHN DILLINGER WAS AMERICA'S ORIGINAL "PUBLIC ENEMY NUMBER ONE".

Dillinger was a rebel from an early age. At school, teachers complained about his "bewildering" personality, and he often bullied the smaller children. Dillinger admitted that his ambitions were very different from those of his classmates. "My buddies wanted to be firemen, farmers or policemen, something like that," he said. "Not me, I just wanted to steal people's money!" After seventh grade, Dillinger left school and went to work. He also started to stay out all night at parties. His father, reportedly a strict parent, feared his son was getting out of control. So, he moved the family from inner city Indianapolis to a rural area of Indiana, hoping the quieter lifestyle would have a positive effect on his son.

But Dillinger refused to settle down. He committed petty crimes and never had a stable job. In 1924, Dillinger planned a robbery with his friend and stole $120 from a local grocery store. Dillinger was caught and, under instructions from his father, pleaded guilty to the crime. Incredibly, the court sentenced him to over ten years in prison. Shocked by the unfair sentence, Dillinger promised to be, "the meanest guy you ever saw when I get out of here".

Dillinger kept to his promise. In prison, he assembled a tough gang. On being released, they committed a series of robberies across Indiana and quickly gained notoriety. Often they would pretend to be sales representatives for a security company in order to gain access to the bank, and then steal the money. Although Dillinger was caught by the police a few times, he always managed to escape. He was known as the man "no jail could hold". Once he even broke out of an "escape-proof" prison by threatening guards with a fake gun which he had made out of wood.

Although Dillinger was a criminal, he was a popular figure with a special kind of charm. He often made funny comments while committing robberies and was once reported as saying, "Now nobody get nervous. You ain't got nothing to fear. You're being robbed by the John Dillinger Gang. That's the best there is!" It was this charm which attracted girlfriend Billie Frechette. On meeting her, Dillinger bought her a fur coat as a present. Frechette quickly fell for him and the couple became inseparable – even after Dillinger told her who he was. She was also loyal to Dillinger. Later, when she was interrogated and beaten by police, she refused to give them any information. But the FBI were never far behind. They assigned agent Melvin Purvis to catch the criminal. Purvis declared Dillinger America's first Public Enemy. Purvis' big breakthrough came when he was given a tip-off by one of Dillinger's acquaintances, Anna Sage. Purvis met Sage on 19th July 1934, and she promised to call Purvis when she knew where Dillinger was. Three days later, Sage telephoned Purvis and told him that Dillinger would be in the Biograph Theater in Chicago that night. The FBI organised a stake out. Dillinger tried to escape but was shot dead during the gun fight.

Now the gangster's story is being retold in the film Public Enemies, with Johnny Depp playing John Dillinger and Christian Bale as Melvin Purvis. Just like the real John Dillinger's life, this film is fast, action-packed and full of danger. So, was Dillinger a modern-day Robin Hood or a dangerous fugitive? You'll have to decide. ✪

John Herbert Dillinger
Famous bank robber and gangster. Born 22nd June 1903. Died 22nd July 1934 (aged 31). Imprisoned from 1924 to 1933.

Ted Kennedy

He was known as the great “Liberal Lion of the Senate”. His dream was for a more compassionate nation. He supported liberal positions on abortion, public education, and capital punishment. He lived a long, tragic and sometimes controversial life, but now he’s been laid to rest. This is the life of Ted Kennedy.

Ted had a privileged childhood. He was born Edward Moore Kennedy on 22nd February 1932 in Massachusetts. He was the youngest of nine children and brother to JFK and Robert Kennedy. Ted grew up in an Irish Catholic family. His mother, Rose Fitzgerald, was the daughter of Boston mayor John Fitzgerald. His father, Joseph P. Kennedy, was a millionaire businessman. In 1950, Ted followed his brothers to Harvard University, but was expelled for cheating (he asked another student to take a Spanish exam in his place). Ted eventually returned to the university after a period in the armed forces. On leaving Harvard, Ted studied at the International Law School (The Hague) and then entered Virginia Law School, where he received his law degree in 1959. By then, Ted knew that he wanted a career in politics.

Things seemed to be going well, but then something happened that was to change Ted’s life forever. On the night of 18th July 1969, Ted accidentally drove his car off an unmarked bridge on Chappaquiddick Island in Massachusetts. His companion in the car, 28-year-old Mary Jo Kopechne, drowned. Instead of going for help or reporting the accident, Ted just left. A judge later found Ted Kennedy guilty of leaving the scene of an accident. The scandal was all over the newspapers and Kennedy was criticised for abandoning the young woman. Many felt that she could have been saved. It was never clear what he was doing with her (he was married at the time), or why he did not report the accident to the police. Despite the scandal, Kennedy was re-elected to the Senate in 1970.

The 1980s weren’t a great time for Ted. This was the era of President Ronald Reagan – the conservative Republican – and Ted’s liberalism wasn’t in fashion. Ted also had trouble at home. There were accusations of philandering and alcohol abuse. In 1982, after 24 years of marriage, he and wife Joan Bennett Kennedy divorced. In 1992 he remarried – this time to a lawyer called Victoria Reggie. Together, they had five children: Kara, Edward Jr, Patrick Kennedy, Curran and Caroline Raclin.

In 1992, things changed after the Democratic victory of Bill Clinton. By the late 1990s, Ted Kennedy had become one of the Senate’s most prominent members. He helped pass bills that affected the lives of many Americans, and supported legislation on immigration reform, criminal code reform, fair housing, public education, health care, AIDS research and a variety of programmes to help the poor. But towards the end of the decade, his health started deteriorating. On 17th May 2008, he went to hospital after a seizure. Three days later doctors diagnosed a brain tumour. On 20th January 2009, he suffered another seizure. Finally, on 25th August 2009, Ted’s battle with brain cancer came to an end. He passed away in the evening at his Cape Cod, Massachusetts, home. The “lion” had died. ✪

His first taste of politics came in 1960. Ted campaigned for his brother, John, in the presidential race. In 1962, shortly after his brother’s victory, Ted was elected to the Senate. At the age of 30, he became a representative for the state of Massachusetts.

But it wasn’t a happy time. In 1963, his brother, then President John F. Kennedy (JFK), was assassinated in Dallas, Texas. A year later, Ted was in a plane crash and spent weeks in the hospital recovering from a back injury and internal bleeding. The injuries caused chronic pain, which affected him for the rest of his life. Ted was unable to campaign for re-election in 1964, but he won anyway in a landslide victory.

The late 1960s was dominated by the Vietnam War. The United States had become deeply involved in the war during JFK’s administration. Ted initially supported the war, but eventually began to speak out against it, especially after reports of poor military planning and political corruption in South Vietnam. He was specifically against the military draft, and the US’s failure to help the victims of the war. In 1968, there was another family tragedy. Ted’s closest brother, Robert, was assassinated during his presidential campaign. After Robert’s death, in 1969, Ted became a front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination.

*Liberal

There are several definitions of the word “liberal”.

In the US, a “liberal” is often used to refer to someone with left-wing, socialist, progressive views (often members of the Democrat Party). This is opposed to people with more right-wing conservative, traditional views (often members of the Republican Party).

In the UK, a liberal is someone who believes that people should be free to do or think as they like. They believe in political and individual freedom and want to defend basic human rights, and are against anything that increases the power of the state. The Liberal Democrat Party in Britain is the main centre party. Amongst many other things, they believe in reforming the constitution and establishing proportional representation in British elections.

However, a liberal system and liberalism can also be used to describe a system that gives companies and organisations a lot of economic freedom. Curiously, in this respect, some aspects of liberalism are associated with market freedom – ideas that are more in line with right-wing, capitalist politics.

Ted Kennedy quotes

"My brother need not be idealised or enlarged in death beyond what he was in life, to be remembered as a good and decent man, who saw wrong and tried to right it, saw suffering and tried to heal it, saw war and tried to stop it."
About his brother Robert Kennedy in June 1968.

"Dad, I'm in some trouble. There's been an accident and you're going to hear all sorts of things about me from now on. Terrible things."
Shortly after the Chappaquiddick accident.

"I regard as indefensible the fact that I did not report the accident to the police immediately."
Talking about the Chappaquiddick incident in July 1969

"Frankly, I don't mind not being president. I just mind that someone else is."

"Well, here I don't go again" - on not running for president in 1988.

"What we have in the United States is not so much a health-care system as a disease-care system."

"Integrity is the lifeblood of democracy. Deceit is a poison in its veins."

"The Republicans are looking after the financial interests of the wealthiest individuals in this country."

"The work goes on, the cause endures, the hope still lives and the dreams shall never die."

"We want to support our troops because they didn't make the decision to go there."

"With Barack Obama, we will turn the page on the old politics of misrepresentation and distortion. With Barack Obama we will close the book on the old politics of race against race, gender against gender, ethnic group against ethnic group, and straight against gay." January 2008. ☺

An updated version of the 1980s' musical. By Emma Weinbren

Few films have made as big an impact as Fame. The 1980s blockbuster made legwarmers fashionable and helped spark a dance craze around the world. Now Fame is back as a remake starring Kelsey Grammer (Frasier/Cheers) and original cast member Debbie Allen.

Only one thing is important to students at the New York City High School of Performing Arts: fame. However, this doesn't come easily. As the tagline says, "How big you make it is all about how far you take it". The aspiring stars must work hard and compete against each other to achieve their dreams. They also have to deal with the everyday pressures of high school that come from homework, friendships and romance. The film follows the students as they experience the highs and the lows of training to become a star.

In reality, the cast of Fame are already stars. Perhaps the most famous is Kelsey Grammer, who is best known for his character Dr Frasier Crane in the television series Frasier. In the film, he plays strict teacher Joel and works alongside dance tutor Fran (played by Megan Mullally). Mullally also has a comedy background and won awards for her role as Karen Walker in the hit sitcom Will and Grace.

The head of the school is Debbie Allen. She was in the original film and played the part of the uncompromising teacher, Lydia Grant. Nearly thirty years later, she has returned to play headmistress Angela.

Some of the students in the film are also stars. Singer Denise is played by Naturi Naughton, who was in the 90s girl group 3LW. Other students include Disney Channel star Kay Panabaker and Anna Maria Perez de Taglé, who featured in Hannah Montana and Camp Rock.

So with a star-studded cast like this, Fame looks set to make a successful return. But let's just hope that legwarmers don't make a comeback, too! 🍀

The Dark Side of Fame

Behind the scenes of our favourite dance series.

Gene Anthony Ray

Lee Curreri

"Fame costs. Right here is where you start paying." This was the immortal opening line of the eighties TV series Fame, which was a spin-off the film of the same name. But real-life fame for many of the actors in the series came at a price.

Many of the stars of the series were catapulted to fame. But success wasn't easy for them. Behind the scenes cast members were suffering from drug abuse, backstage feuds and exhaustion. Gene Anthony Ray was perhaps the most troubled star of all. On screen he played temperamental dancer Leroy Johnson, who gained a place at the academy through his impressive street dancing skills. The tough character, who often violently disagreed with his teachers, soon became a hit with the fans. In real life, Ray enjoyed his new status, partying every night and buying extravagant items such as diamond jewellery. However, he soon discovered the downside of fame, and started to drink heavily and take drugs regularly. As a result, he often missed rehearsals.

It wasn't long before his life was spiralling out of control. In 1984, he was fired from the show. "For five months I sat at home in front of the TV and stuffed my face with junk food," he recalled. Ray had spent all his savings on drugs and was rumoured to be sleeping on park benches. Things went from bad to worse when the star was diagnosed HIV positive in 1996. Tragically, Gene Anthony Ray died from a stroke in 2003.

But Ray wasn't the only cast member to become involved with drugs. Lee Curreri, who played the part of young musician Bruno Martelli, took cocaine to help him deal with his stressful workload. The combination of composing, acting and performing songs made him increasingly tired. "Back then, this stuff was rampant," he explained. "In LA people would do it out open in a restaurant". He left the series after a few seasons due to a disagreement with the production team. Curreri was frustrated that he had to mime his piano playing and complained that the producers "didn't want to deal with creative issues".

Tensions such as this were not uncommon among the cast. There were numerous reports of clashes between Erica Gimpel, who played student Coco Hernandez, and co-star Debbie Allen. Debbie Allen played academy headmistress Lydia Grant and was rumoured to be as strict in real life as her on-screen persona. Allen coordinated the live Fame tour in the UK and her hard approach didn't always make her popular with the rest of the cast.

Halfway through the tour, Erica Gimpel walked out after an argument with Allen. Gimpel claimed she was exhausted. In a recent interview Erica described Debbie as "tough", explaining that "she would get in your face, you know, she was that kind of person". In her defence, Allen admits she was demanding, but she defined this as "tough love". "They were playing with a lot of dangerous, hot things", she explained, referring to the cast's wild antics on the tour. She maintains that a strong rule was needed to keep the young actors on track. Despite these differences, the two women are now reconciled.

For these cast members, fame really did come at a cost. Let's hope that the current cast of this year's Fame film will know how to cope with their celebrity status. ✪

Dance Types

Read our guide to some of the top dances from around the world.

Line dancing

Line dancing is a group dance often associated with American country music. Dancers form a line and perform steps in time with each other and the music. This type of dancing became particularly popular in America in the 1970s. Line dancing took off in many other countries in the 1990s thanks to country hits such as Billy Ray Cyrus's "Achy Breaky Heart".

Morris dancing

Morris dancing is an English folk dance traditionally performed in spring. Dancers in white costumes and step together as a group, often using sticks or swords and waving handkerchiefs in the air. This type of dancing is mostly performed in rural areas of England.

Irish dancing

Irish dancing is a group dance made popular in 1994 by the "Riverdance" show. The dance is performed by kicking the legs quickly and precisely while maintaining the upper body still. Performers traditionally dance to Irish folk music.

Northern soul

The Northern Soul dance movement started in England in the 1960s. It was part of the craze for Northern Soul music, an American Motown style which was particularly popular in areas of northern England such as Manchester. This is an athletic style of dancing features spins, flips and backdrops.

Ballet dancing

Ballet is an originally French dance which has been performed for centuries. The dance is traditionally accompanied by classical music. One of the most famous ballet pieces is Swan Lake. Ballet is highly technical and it takes years to train. Ballet dancers must master moves such as the fouette, the arabesque and the grand jeté, which involves doing the splits in mid-air. flips and backdrops.

Salsa dancing

Salsa is a Latin dance which is performed by couples. Throughout the dance, the upper body remains more or less level while the hips sway from side to side. This is known as the "Cuban hip movement". Although the dance originated in the Caribbean, it is popular all over the world.

Tap dancing

Tap dancing is performed by dancers with metal soles on their shoes. This makes a distinctive tapping sound. There are no clear origins of tap dancing and various forms have been found in Africa, Ireland, England and the West Indies. Tap was popularised in the 1930s by Steve Condos, who brought his own innovative dance style to Broadway. This paved the way for famous tap dancers such as Fred Astaire in the 1940s and 1950s.

Break dancing

Break dancing is an urban dance style which originated in New York in the 1970s. The dance evolved among young people as a form of street entertainment. It is mostly performed to hip-hop music and involves a number of gravity-defying moves such as balancing on one hand. Break dancing became popular after being featured in music videos such as Run DMC's It's Like That.

Ballroom dancing

This type of dancing includes a number of different styles from the waltz to the cha cha. Dances can be either slow or upbeat, but they are always performed in pairs. Two of the most famous ballroom dancers Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, who gave ballroom dancing a touch of Hollywood glamour in the 1930s. Ballroom dancing has made a comeback in recent years as a result of a number of reality TV shows.

How to dance

Do you want to dance like a pro? Follow our simple guide and you'll soon be spinning through the air.

Pay for dance classes or hire a personal dance instructor.

Rent a few dance movies or instructional DVDs and copy the moves. Pay attention to the dancers' body alignment, posture and technique.

Wear the right shoes and clothing. That leotard or tutu may make you feel silly, but at least you'll be warm and comfortable.

Breathe carefully and consistently. Before starting, take a few deep breaths, and keep breathing as you dance (or you might die!).

Dance to music you like! There's no point dancing to songs you don't enjoy listening to.

Smile! At least you'll appear to be having a good time.

Keep it simple. Avoid any complex dance manoeuvres until you've mastered advanced techniques.

Mix it up! Learn a variety of steps so you don't keep doing the same things.

Perfect your posture! Stand up straight, push your shoulders back and hold your head up high. Be a proud dancer! And remember to relax – if your body is tense, you'll move like a robot.

Take the floor! Don't just stand on the side – get into the middle and show them your moves.

Keep it safe! Your number one objective should be to leave the dance floor in one piece. And when dancing with a partner, try to cause as little injury as possible.

Above all, have fun! Remember, dancing is supposed to be an enjoyable activity. 😊

And if all else fails, just watch this guy. He may not be a dance champ, but he certainly knows how to enjoy himself.

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-hpJR-3gZDQ&feature=related>

Do a bit of stretching every day to make your body much more flexible. After a few months, you'll be doing the splits in the air.

Coco Chanel

HER TRADEMARK SUITS AND LITTLE BLACK DRESSES BECAME POPULAR ALL OVER THE WORLD. SHE WAS A STYLE ICON AND FASHIONISTA, BUT COCO CHANEL BECAME AN OBJECT OF HATRED TO SOME. NOW THERE'S A NEW FILM ABOUT HER.

Coco Chanel didn't have a glamorous start to life. She was born Gabrielle Bonheur Chanel on 19th August 1883, in Saumur, France. After her mother's death, Chanel was put in an orphanage by her father. She was raised by nuns who taught her how to sew – something which became useful to her in later life. Around the age of 20, Chanel started a relationship with Etienne Balsan who offered to help her start a millinery business in Paris. She left him soon afterwards for one of his even wealthier friends, Arthur "Boy" Capel.

With the necessary financial backing, Chanel opened her first shop on Paris's Rue Cambon in 1910. She started selling hats. Within a short period of time, she opened more shops in Deauville and Biarritz and began making clothes. Her first dress was made out of an old jumper. Many people seemed to like it and asked her where she got it from. "My fortune is built on that old jersey that I'd put on because it was cold in Deauville," she once told author Paul Morand.

In the 1920s, Chanel launched her first perfume, Chanel No. 5. It was the first time that a perfume had featured a designer's name. In 1925, she introduced the now world-famous Chanel suit. Her designs were revolutionary for the time. Above all, they were comfortable – gone were the days of restrictive corsets. Another 1920s revolutionary design was Chanel's little black dress. At the time, black was associated with mourning, but Coco showed how chic black could be.

The international economic depression of the 1930s was bad for Chanel's business. But the Second World War changed everything for her. After the German invasion of Paris, Chanel closed her business. She lay low for a while, but later became involved with a German military officer, Hans Gunther von Dincklage who was stationed in Paris. Eventually, she got special permission to return to her apartment at the Hotel Ritz, where many other German officers were staying. It was there that she lived a life of luxury, while many others in her country suffered. After the war ended, she was interrogated, but not charged as a collaborator. Thousands of other French women had their heads shaved for collaborating. Chanel was allowed to go.

Coco Chanel

French fashion designer and founder of the Chanel fashion label. Born 19th August 1883. Died 10th January 1971. Some say her nickname comes from her times as a singer in clubs in Vichy and Moulins, where she was called "Coco". Others say it could be a shortened version of the French word "cocotte", which means "kept woman".

Many of her compatriots were unwilling to forgive her. They saw Chanel's relationship with a Nazi officer as a betrayal. Immediately after the war, Chanel left Paris and went to live in Switzerland. In 1954, she returned to Paris to launch a new collection, but it didn't have much success with Parisians, but was very popular with Americans. Chanel eventually died on 10th January 1971, at her apartment in the Hotel Ritz in Paris. Hundreds attended the funeral at the Church of the Madeleine... many of them wearing Chanel suits. These days, the company she founded continues to thrive. Coco lives on. ☺

Coco Chanel Quotes

"A fashion that does not reach the streets is not a fashion."

"Elegance is refusal."

"In order to be irreplaceable one must always be different."

"Success is often achieved by those who don't know that failure is inevitable."

"Luxury must be comfortable, otherwise it is not luxury."

"Nature gives you the face you have at twenty; it is up to you to merit the face you have at fifty."

"Some people think luxury is the opposite of poverty. It is not. It is the opposite of vulgarity."

"Innovation! One cannot be forever innovating. I want to create classics."

"In fashion, you know you have succeeded when there is an element of upset."

Coco Avant Chanel (2009)

A French film about the life of the young Coco Chanel. Starring Audrey Tatou as Coco Chanel and directed by Anne Fontaine. The film ignores the controversial war years. There have been many films on the life of the designer, and even a Broadway musical (Coco, 1969) which starred Katharine Hepburn.

5 Discussion

- Are there any famous conspiracy theories from your country? What are they about?
- Have there been any more recent conspiracy theories? What about?
- Why do you think there are conspiracy theories?
- What sort of person becomes a conspiracy theorist?

Is Paul McCartney really alive? Did the moon landings really take place? Was Princess Diana the victim of a murder plot? These are some of the many conspiracy theories that just won't go away.

Some claim the Apollo 11 Moon landing never took place. The event was broadcast around the world in 1969, but conspiracy theorists think it was an elaborate hoax by the US government. They say the government was determined to beat Russia in the race to the moon. So, they arranged for the event to be filmed in a film studio.

Another popular theory surrounds the topic of energy. Conspiracy theorists say that advanced technology could provide the world with unlimited clean energy. However, this information is being suppressed by groups who are profiting from oil and gas production. Other theorists are convinced that the world's power and financial systems are controlled by secret societies, such as the Bilderberg group.

And others claim that those in power are trying to control our minds. Their advice is for everyone to wear tin foil hats. They believe the metal will shield the brain against electromagnetic fields.

A popular urban legend alleges that Paul McCartney of The Beatles died in 1966. Theorists say he was replaced by look- and sound-alike, William Campbell. Since then, they say, clues have been planted in Beatles' lyrics, such as some mumbling by John Lennon recorded between the songs "I'm So Tired" and "Blackbird", and the phrase "Paul is a dead, man. Miss him!", which can be heard if you play "Blackbird" backwards. A more modern conspiracy theory says that Princess Diana was the victim of a murder plot by the royal family. Theorists claim that elements within the royal family wanted to prevent Diana from marrying again.

One of the most famous conspiracy theories concerns the cover-up of alien activity. Some claim that an alien spaceship crashed in Roswell, New Mexico, on 8th July 1947. The official version was that the crashed object was a weather balloon. But conspiracy theorists say that the military discovered and retrieved various parts of a spacecraft and even the bodies of extra-terrestrials.

So, what do you think? Are you a conspiracy theorist? Do you have any conspiracy theories of your own? ☺

1. Why are some people digging up their back gardens?
2. What has the queen's garden got apart from the vegetable patch?
3. What are they trying to promote?
4. When was the last time that vegetables were grown there?
5. Why were vegetables grown in Buckingham Palace during World War 2?
6. What has Michelle Obama done?

4 Language focus

Compound adjectives

Look at this sentence from the article: "...there was a government-inspired push..."

"Government-inspired" is an example of a compound adjective (an adjective formed by two words). Here are some more compound adjectives. Make 3 sentences with any of them.

6 Discussion

1. Do you do any gardening? Why? Why not?
2. Why do you think gardening is so popular amongst some people?
3. What are the pros and cons of gardening?
4. What would you grow if you had a garden? / What do you grow? Why?

People all over the world are finding new ways to deal with the economic recession. One popular measure is to grow your own vegetables to save on food bills. Even the queen is doing her bit.

Gardening is big business in the UK. Most houses in the UK have gardens, and many people grow flowers, plants and vegetables. Others have a nice lawn for lying on the grass, playing games or organising barbecue parties. But these days, many people are digging up their backyard gardens and planting potatoes, carrots, onions, tomatoes, cabbages, lettuce and beans. This can really help with the budget. Plus, it provides a supply of healthy and fresh food.

Even the Queen has joined in. She has started her own vegetable patch inside the 40-acre grounds of Buckingham Palace. It is now the capital's biggest private garden and the setting for the Queen's annual garden parties. The garden is also home to a lake, a helicopter landing area and a tennis court where King George VI used to play against Fred Perry. "We are trying to promote growing your own food and vegetables, and getting families and children involved – getting their hands dirty," said Claire Midgeley, the Queen's deputy head gardener. "It's a growing movement throughout the country and we're just hoping to encourage that." In the garden, the Queen has been growing runner beans, leeks, beetroot and an endangered variety of climbing French beans called Blue Queen.

This isn't the first time that vegetables have been grown at the palace. During World War II, there was a government-inspired push to encourage people to grow their own vegetables known as the Dig for Victory campaign. The idea was to get ordinary people to help with the war effort. At the time, food was scarce as there were very few imports. Royals and others produced 1.3m tons of food. This home grown production meant imports could be halved, which was important as merchant navy food shipments were coming under attack from enemy U-boats.

Meanwhile, across the Atlantic, Michelle Obama, the current president's wife, has dug up some of the White House's presidential lawn in order to create an organic community garden. So, are you going to do your bit? ☺

GLOSSARY

- a recession n
a period when the economy is doing very badly
- to do your bit exp
to contribute to something
- a lawn n
an area of flat, well-preserved grass
- a backyard n US

6. To be pants (informal)
7. Straight-talking

5 Discussion

1. Have you seen any of these reality shows? Which ones do you like? Why?
2. What are the most popular reality shows in your country?
3. Why do you think reality shows are so popular?
4. Could you think of an idea for a reality show?

How far would you go to get your dream job? In the reality TV show The Apprentice, 15 candidates compete against each other to work with multi-millionaire Alan Sugar. But the competition is far from easy. Backstabbing, high pressure and ruthless decisions are all part of the deal.

Being on The Apprentice is like being on a 12 week job interview. The candidates are split into two teams and each week they are given a difficult business task to complete. The tasks are designed to test their skills in salesmanship, negotiation, leadership, teamwork and organisation. At the start of each episode, the teams each choose a project manager to act as the team leader for the duration of the task. And then they try to make some money.

The tasks are both varied and challenging. In one episode, the teams had to design a TV and print advertising campaign for Amstrad's new Jukebox music system. Then, they had to pitch the idea to potential buyers. In another episode, they had to sell pizzas at an Italian-themed stall at a London festival. That went disastrously wrong when they bought too many ingredients and made too few pizzas. In another episode, they had to buy British produce to sell at a French farmers' market. The plan was to buy some cheap cheese from a British supermarket and sell it off to unsuspecting French customers. It didn't work too well. In another episode, the participants had to design greetings cards with an environmental theme. One of the salespeople became over enthusiastic and told potential buyers that if they didn't buy the cards, they'd be damaging the environment.

At the end of each task, both teams are called into the boardroom to discuss things with Alan Sugar. Their performance is evaluated and the winning team is rewarded for their hard work. However, the losing team must explain what went wrong. Finally, Alan Sugar fires the candidate he believes is most responsible for the loss. The process continues over the weeks until Alan Sugar has only one candidate left, who will become his apprentice. In the boardroom, the candidates are often involved in heated arguments, especially when they have to defend themselves. One candidate, Michael Sophocles, became infamous for his backstabbing antics in Series Four. He continually blamed his colleagues for the team's losses. He was eventually fired after unsuccessfully trying to rent out an expensive Ferrari at Portobello Road market – a place where Londoners traditionally go for a bargain, not to spend large amounts of money.

A lot of the humour in the show comes from the contestants' stupid mistakes or silly ideas. One of the most notorious incidents was in Series Five. The teams were asked to design a cereal box for children. Arrogant contestant Philip came up with the idea of a superhero called "Pantsman", who wore his pants on the outside of his trousers. He also invented a Pantsman song and dance to accompany the promotion. Needless to say, executives were not impressed and concluded that the idea was, well, pants.

The show is also famous for Alan Sugar's cutting remarks. He's straight-talking and isn't afraid to tell the candidates exactly what he thinks of them. After firing one candidate who hadn't managed to sell anything, he said, "whoever employs him, better get a receipt". And he told another candidate that "there might be a village missing an idiot somewhere".

So, if you can deal with a hard-nosed boss, backstabbing colleagues and a great deal of embarrassment, why not apply for the next series? Who knows, you might become Alan Sugar's apprentice! 🍕

Cow Aversion

A radical solution to anti-social behaviour.

What's the best way to deal with vandals? Simple! Buy some cows. A local council had been receiving a number of complaints about troublesome youngsters in a park in Scotland. "It was terrible," explained Betty Booth, a resident from the area. "Those young kids rode onto the park with their motorcycles and tore up the surface and broke down fences. They threw things at the children and they even burnt a wooden slide. We called the police, but they couldn't do anything."

The council was at a loss until someone suggested using cows to deter the youngsters. Desperate for ideas, the council bought 8 cows and let them loose on the park grounds to graze. And it seems to have worked. "Since the cattle were put in, the anti-social behaviour has dropped dramatically and the people using the park are much happier. I believe using cows really works," a member of the local council explained. The council are currently considering whether cows may be the solution to other sites with anti-social behaviour. ✨

Corny Criminals

Mii Photos

The police use a videogame program to help fight crime.

In a bid to cut down on expenses, the Tokyo police department has resorted to unusual measures. Instead of paying artists to draw photofit images of wanted criminals, they're using the computer program Wii. One feature of the popular console is "Mii". This allows users to create their own computer-generated character to use on the games. And it's easy to do. You simply select from a range of different face shapes, hairstyles, eyes, ears and other features and make an image of yourself. Then, you can fine-tune it by adjusting the clothing, size and expressions. You can put together a caricature in a question of seconds. It was originally intended for gamer users on Nintendo products such as Wii Sports and Wii Fit. But now the police are using it too. The police's first Mii was of a young man with long brown hair and sunglasses. He was wanted for a hit-and-run accident in the south of the country. The image, along with a photo of the type of car involved, was posted on game blogs and websites. "Who needs sketch artists now?" a spokesperson for the police department said. "These Mii's are perfect." ✨

IT WAS PROBABLY THE MOST EXPENSIVE CUP OF COFFEE IN HISTORY. IN 1992, STELLA LIEBECK WAS AWARDED MORE THAN $2 MILLION IN DAMAGES AFTER INJURING HERSELF WITH A CUP OF COFFEE. THE BIG QUESTIONS: HOW? AND WHY?

In 1992, Stella Liebeck was in the passenger seat of her car. She had just ordered a takeaway coffee from a McDonald's drive-through restaurant. Her grandson, Chris, parked the car so that Liebeck could add cream and sugar to the drink. But as she placed the coffee cup between her knees, she spilt the entire cup of burning hot coffee on her lap. Ouch!

Initially, Liebeck wanted to settle out of court. She demanded $20,000 to cover her medical costs. However, the company offered just $800, and refused to raise its offer. So, Liebeck contracted a lawyer, Reed Morgan. Morgan filed suit in a New Mexico District Court accusing the company of "gross negligence" for selling coffee that was "unreasonably dangerous". Morgan raised the amount to $90,000, but the restaurant refused once again. Eventually, the case went the trial.

During the case, Liebeck's lawyers made some interesting discoveries. They found out that franchisees of the restaurant chain were being told to serve coffee at 82° to 88°C. At that temperature, coffee causes a third-degree burn in two to seven seconds. However, Liebeck's lawyer argued that coffee should never be served hotter than 60°C. After days of deliberation, the jury returned its verdict: guilty! They found that McDonald's was 80% responsible for the incident and Liebeck was 20% at fault. Although there was a warning on the coffee cup, the jury decided that the warning was neither large enough nor sufficient. They awarded Liebeck US$200,000 in compensatory damages, which was then reduced to $160,000. In addition, they awarded her $2.7 million in punitive damages. However, the judge reduced the punitive damages to $480,000. The decision was appealed by both McDonald's and Liebeck in December 1994, but the parties eventually settled out of court for approximately $600,000. Liebeck died on 4th August 2004, at the age of 91 having enjoyed the most expensive cup of coffee in the world. ☺

Outrageous US lawsuits

Liebeck's case isn't unusual. Here are some more outrageous lawsuits.

Mrs Merv Grazinski of Oklahoma sued Winnebago for $1.75 million after she crashed her motor home at 90 kph. At the time, she was making a sandwich in the back. She argued that the firm failed to inform her that you can't do this while the vehicle is set on cruise control.

Kara Walton, of Claymont, Delaware sued the owner of a nightclub for $12,000 for falling out of a bathroom window at the club. At the time, she was trying to get in without paying.

Jerry Williams, of Little Rock, Arkansas, was awarded $14,500 plus medical expenses after being bitten by a neighbour's dog. At the time, Mr Williams was in his neighbour's backyard shooting the dog with a pellet gun.

Terrence Dickson of Bristol, Pennsylvania, won $500,000 from the insurance company of a family whose home he burgled. Dickson got into the garage, but couldn't get out and was trapped inside for eight days.

Carl Truman, 19, of Los Angeles, California, won $74,000 plus medical expenses for injuries to his hand. Truman had been trying to steal the hubcaps from his neighbour's car when the neighbour accidentally ran over Truman's hand.

Kathleen Robertson of Texas was awarded $80,000 plus medical costs against the owners of a store when she broke her ankle after tripping over a running child. The child was her son. ☺

THE GUINNESS IN THIS STEW ADDS SOMETHING VERY SPECIAL TO THIS DELICIOUS RECIPE. PERFECT FOR AN AUTUMN NIGHT AT HOME.

Ingredients

- 1 onion
- 3 cloves of garlic
- 1 stick of celery
- 2 carrots (chopped)
- A handful of mushrooms (sliced)
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1 can/bottle of Guinness
- Beef stock (enough to cover the meat)
- Meat (in cubes)
- Cheese (grated)
- Pastry dough
- Olive oil
- Salt & pepper

Method

Fry the onions in olive oil. Add the garlic, celery, carrots, mushrooms and meat and cook for five minutes. Then, add the beef stock, the Guinness and the flour and cook for about one hour until the liquid has been reduced.

Meanwhile, cover the inside of an oven or pudding bowl with pastry dough and pour. Then, when the food is ready, pour it into the bowl. Add the grated cheese on top and cover the top with layer of pastry dough. Put in the oven for about 40 minutes. Delicious! ✨

Actor Russell Crowe challenges journalist to a race.

Crowe Calls

“When you make a living throwing stones, you expect that one day someone is going to lob one back. This was that day,” said Australian newspaper columnist Annette Sharp after she made fun of Crowe for smoking during after exercising. In response, the actor (Crowe) challenged the writer (Sharp) to a race.

It all started with a bike ride. One day, Crowe was out cycling with his personal trainer. After a strenuous workout, they stopped for a rest. During the break, Crowe smoked a cigarette, ate some tacos and drank a soft drink. Reporters were there and took photos. Later, Ms Sharp wrote up a story about for Sydney’s Daily Telegraph under the headline, “Smokes and fatty foods – the fitness regime for Rusty!” Another day, another story, they thought. But the next day, Sharp received a phone call from Crowe’s spokesman. “Get on your bike, Anette,” he said. “Russell wants you to go riding with him. Are you ready to die?”

The cycle ride, a 19.3km race through the city, wasn’t easy. Video of the early morning duel shows Crowe speeding along with Ms Sharp struggling to keep up. Later, Crowe tells Ms Sharp she is a better cyclist than Australian film director Baz Luhrmann. At one point, Ms Sharp falls off her bike. “I was sliding down the track when I came off the seat and landed painfully on the crossbar,” she explained. “This was surely it. His victory moment, with me sprawled in the dirt. Yet he was gracious, concerned – the perfect gentleman as he rolled up my trousers to check my knee.”

Crowe is famous for his animosity towards journalists (despite having played one in the film State Of Play). During a recent interview he criticised journalists for “trivialising the news” and emphasising things that are “known to be a lie.” ❖

1. Cove
2. Bay
3. Fishing village
4. Coastline
5. Beach
6. Waves
7. Cliff
8. Dunes

2 Reading I

Cornwall is a coastal area in the south-west of England. What do you think it's like? What do you think you can find there? Think for a few minutes, then read the article once to check your ideas.

3 Reading II

Write words to describe each place or thing from the article.

1. The town of St Ives.
2. The beaches in the St Ives area.
3. The Eden Project.
4. The Tate Modern.
5. A Cornish cream tea.
6. The Minack Theatre.

4 Language focus Adjectives + prepositions

1. Satisfied _____
2. Disappointed _____
3. Delighted _____
4. Grateful _____
5. Shocked _____

5 Discussion

1. Have you ever been to Cornwall? Would you like to go? Why? Why not?
2. What's your favourite coastal area in your country? Why do you like it?
3. What environmental dangers do coastal areas face? What can be done to protect them?

"Cornwall again?" As a teenager, this was how I reacted to the prospect of yet another holiday in the Cornish town of St Ives. While my friends were happily sunning themselves in the Caribbean or other far-flung destinations, I felt hard done by, finding myself left behind in gloomy old England. However, I soon came to love the place. It may not have the tropical climate of the Caribbean, or the warm waters of the Mediterranean, but Cornwall, nonetheless, has a lot to offer. The town of St Ives is situated in an area of outstanding natural beauty and is home to quaint cobbled streets, beautiful beaches and a rich cultural offering.

British beaches have acquired a bad reputation over the years. The British seaside conjures up images of tacky piers, rainy days and dilapidated hotels. But the beaches in the St Ives area of Cornwall boast long stretches of golden sand and crystal clear water. And not a tacky pier in sight. Not only this, but Cornwall also has the warmest climate in England and the highest number of sunshine hours. All this allows you to sunbathe in swimwear without suffering from goose bumps, mild hypothermia or whiplash from a fierce wind. A word of warning, though. Although the weather is warm, don't be deceived into thinking that the sea water is too. If you aren't accustomed to the cold, a quick dip in the icy waters will literally take your break away. After some traumatic incidents during my teenage years, I would only recommend swimming in the British sea to either the very brave or the completely insane.

It's easy to see how St Ives has become so beloved. The town has won awards for its gardens, which, thanks to the mild climate, are able to sustain both native and sub-tropical plants. In fact, it's sometimes difficult to believe you're in England when you're surrounded by the bright, exotic flowers and palm trees. Only a few kilometres away is the world-famous Eden Project (one of the UK's top visitor gardens). From the outside, the futuristic white domes may look a little strange against the natural Cornish landscape. However, the inside is even more surprising. Underneath the shelter of the domes, the designers have managed to create both a rainforest and a Mediterranean environment. You can find everything from tropical chilli plants to the "carnivorous" Puya plant, which can grow up to 3 metres tall. But if you're looking for something a little more rugged and a little less artificial, Cornwall has a number of breathtaking coastal walks. The dramatic coastline provides the perfect setting for a spectacular backdrop to a long-distance hike, punctuated by frequent visits to the pub along the way. With spectacular soaring cliffs and secluded coves, it's hard not to fall in love with the scenery.

But if the weather doesn't allow for outdoor activities, there's plenty to do besides. The town itself is full of places to explore. The quaint cobbled streets house a number of quirky and interesting shops. You can buy freshly-baked bread at the local bakery, browse the specialist hobby shops, or simply enjoy a coffee at one of the town's cosy cafés. And no visit to Cornwall would be complete without a Cornish cream tea. As many locals will testify, there are few things better than a warm scone served with fresh clotted cream and homemade jam. You should also try the local food, especially the seafood.

Looking for a bit of culture? There are plenty of cultural places to visit. The Tate Modern is the most famous museum in St Ives. The gallery has a selection of international contemporary art and the exhibits are sometimes highly controversial. The Minack Theatre is perhaps less famous, but no less interesting. This outdoor theatre was constructed in the 1930s and is an impressive sight, with a carved stone stage and seats as well as landscape gardens. Actors often perform classic plays and there are sometimes even operas. It recently won an Enjoy England award for excellence as a tourist attraction.

So don't be put off by the British seaside's reputation: give St Ives a try. With its unique scenery, picturesque town centre and numerous places of interest, it truly has something to offer. 🍷

5 Discussion

1. What's the most ridiculous court case you've ever heard about?
2. Have you ever been tempted to sue someone? Why?
3. What's involved when you take someone to court? Is it ever worth it?

Ever since Stella Liebeck spilt coffee on herself back in 1994 and sued McDonald's to cover her medical costs, people have been coming up with ever-more ingenious ways to make a fast buck. In fact, in the words of a famous judge, some of the lawsuits are "so outrageous that they actually give frivolous lawsuits a bad name". But not all of them are successful.

During the 1990s, Budweiser ran a series of adverts in which two beautiful women appeared in front of a couple of truck drivers who were drinking cans of Bud. Impressed by the ad, Michigan man Richard Overton bought a case of the beer and waited for his beautiful women to appear... but they didn't. So, he sued the company for false advertising. He cited emotional distress and mental injury and demanded over $10,000 in damages. Case dismissed.

In 1995, Robert Lee Brock, a prison inmate in Virginia, claimed the crime he committed while drunk had violated his civil liberties and religious beliefs. So, he sued himself for $5m in the hope the state would be forced to pay on his behalf. Case dismissed.

Norman Cake, a 178-cm, 123-kilo New Yorker filed a lawsuit claiming that he'd been forced to eat in fast food restaurants four or five times per week. He said that the fast food chains were profiting from his poor health and weren't warning him that the food they were serving was harmful. Case dismissed. The judge also barred it from being filed a third time.

Roy Pearson thought he was being reasonable when he sued his neighbourhood dry cleaner's for $65m. He claimed "mental suffering, inconvenience and discomfort". He also said the "Satisfaction Guaranteed" and "Same Day Service" signs in the dry cleaners represented fraud. So, what had the company done to deserve such a lawsuit? They'd lost his trousers. Case dismissed. Pearson, who was actually a judge himself, eventually lost his job as a judge, too.

The mayor of Batman, a city in Turkey, is currently trying to sue Warner Brothers. He claims that the makers of the latest Batman movie, The Dark Knight, used his city's name without permission. Mayor Huseyin Kalkan is also blaming the moviemakers for a number of unsolved murders and suicides, which, he claims, are due to the psychological impact the film's success has had on the city's inhabitants.

You couldn't make it up! ❖

READING II

Five-Star Reviews

Online buying and misleading comments.

1 Pre-reading

ANSWERS ON PAGE 45

Read the two user reviews below. Which one do you think is fake? Why? What makes you think so?

The Masked Rider
by Horsham Philips

This book is fantastic. Buy it! It's a great read. The quality of the writing is superb, and the illustrations are beautiful. I would recommend it to everyone.

I bought this book for my husband for his birthday and I read it too. I am a big fan of Horsham Philips, but I feel this book isn't quite up to his usual standard. It starts off well, with an interesting story line, but towards the middle it tends to drag a bit. However, I must say the ending was rather surprising, and I was glad that I made it to the end. Not one of his best, but worth it if you're a fan.

With the ever-increasing popularity of online shopping, users reviews are becoming more and more important. Given that you can't actually touch, see, smell or hear the product you're buying online, these forms of public feedback provide valuable information on the product itself. But how far can you trust them?

Sybil Mathews was the victim of a fake user review. "I was planning a holiday to Sardinia, Italy and was looking for a hotel.

So, I decided to browse through a holiday website. We read three reviews giving glowing praise to this hotel in central Sardinia, so we decided to book a few nights there. However, when we got there, it was horrible – really dirty, expensive and nothing like the one described on the website."

2 Reading I

How do you think you can spot a fake user review? Think of as many ideas as you can. Then, read the article to check your ideas.

3 Reading II

Read the article again and answer the questions.

1. Why did Sybil Mathews read the user review before going on holiday?
2. Why was Barnaby Bicken disappointed with the restaurant he went to?
3. What are the best things to look out for when it comes to user reviews?
4. What did one publishing company offer?
5. What do Amazon do if a customer reports a review?
6. Who are TripAdvisor relying on to help them detect fake reviews?

4 Language focus

Verbs + prepositions

Look at this sentence from the article: "The best thing is to look for reviewers who demonstrate some relevant knowledge of the product they are reviewing." Notice how the preposition "for" combines with the verb "to look". Complete these expressions with the correct prepositions. Then, read the article again to check.

1. Browse _____ a website
2. Submit a review _____ a website
3. Start _____ doing something
4. Watch out _____ something
5. Relate something _____ another thing
6. Take something _____ (remove)

5 Discussion

1. Do you read user reviews before buying things? Why? Why not?
2. Have you ever written a user review? What was it for?
3. Do you think user reviews are useful? Why? Why not?

Barnaby Bicken had a similar experience. "I took some important clients to a restaurant in Manchester that had excellent reviews on a food website. However, the service was awful and we were ignored most of the time. Later, I wrote a review and submitted it to the same site only to be told that the review site owner would not accept any 'bad' reviews – only the good ones. Yet nowhere did he say this on the site."

So, how can you spot a fake user review? Web expert Hilary Saunders has a few top tips. "If there are only a few reviews of a place, there is a good chance they've been planted by friends or foes. If there are many reviews, start by dropping the most extreme comments. Stay well away from things such as 'Go here, it's great!' or 'Buy this! It's cheap and works! 'Also, watch out for similarities in style between reviews from people with different usernames, particularly if those reviews were placed about the same time. And finally, watch out for a sudden wave of five-star reviews after a run of lower ratings. The best thing is to look for reviewers who demonstrate some relevant knowledge of the product they are reviewing. Those who can justify their comments by relating them to aspects of the product are usually the genuine ones."

Some companies seem to be contributing to the problem. Just recently, a publishing giant offered gift vouchers to anyone who would give their textbook a five-star review. But not all online vendors are so cynical. "Amazon works hard to maintain the integrity of its customer reviews," said a spokesperson for the company. "We have very clear guidelines, and when a customer reports a review that they feel is inappropriate, we investigate, and may (or may not) take it down."

And a spokesperson for the travel reviews website TripAdvisor said, "Every review is screened prior to posting and a team of quality assurance specialists investigate suspicious ones; we have proprietary automated tools that help identify attempts to subvert the system; and our 25 million monthly visitors also help police our content."

So, next time you see that 5-star review for something you want to buy, beware – it could be the work of a fake reviewer! ❗

Favourite City Track 8

People talk about their favourite cities.

Good morning and welcome to Travel Today. On today's programme we've asked people to name their favourite cities and tell us what it is that makes them so special.

Person 1

My favourite city is Toronto in Canada. It's most famous for the CN Tower, which is over 500 metres tall. Lots of tourists go there to stand on the glass floor. It's great – you can see everything below you, but it's a really strange feeling. There's also great nightlife in Toronto. There are lots of different bars and clubs in the centre. Toronto is also close to the Niagara Falls. Most people who visit Toronto spend at least a day there. I think it's one of those things you have to see – it's incredible.

Person 2

For me, the best city in the world has to be Dubai. Fifty years ago, there was nothing there – just desert, but now it's a new busy city. All the buildings are really modern and there are lots of skyscrapers. At the moment, they're building the Burj Dubai, which will be the tallest building in the world – 818 metres high. Another great thing about Dubai is that it's got beautiful beaches. It's hot there all year round, so you can go to the beach anytime!

Person 3

My favourite city is London. There's such a great atmosphere and there are so many different areas. Knightsbridge has all the posh shops like Harrods, but there are also lots of interesting markets, such as Camden, if you want something less expensive. Another thing I like about London is visiting all the different locations from films. Many famous films are set in London such as Notting Hill, James Bond and Bridget Jones's Diary. You can go and see what they're like in real life. I really like the London Eye, too. It's a giant wheel that takes you high up. You can see most of the city from the top.

Person 4

Vienna is the best city I've ever visited. Everything's so pretty there and it's got some of the most beautiful buildings in the world, such as the Belvedere Palace and the National Theatre. It's also got a lot of culture. Many famous composers lived in Vienna so music is a big thing there. There's a huge concert house where they have classical music concerts, and you can see the famous Vienna boys' choir. There's nowhere else like it in the world.

Technical Problems (track 12)

Dealing with customer service departments.

Automated Voice: Welcome to IT City. To help us deal with your call as quickly as possible, please select one of the following options. Press 1 if you'd like to place an order. Press 2 if you'd like to change your order. Press 3 if you'd like to cancel your order. Press 4 if you'd like to make a payment. Press 5 if you'd like to change your details. Press 6 if you have a technical problem. And press 7 if you'd like to speak to our customer service department.

Automated Voice: Thank you. To help us deal with your technical problem, please select one of the following options. Press 1 if you're having problems connecting to the internet. Press 2 if your screen has frozen. Press 3 if you're having difficulties installing new software. Press 4 if your computer is running slowly. Press 5 if you'd like to speak to someone in the technical services department.

Angela: Hello, and welcome to IT City. My name is Angela. Could you please confirm your user number, please?

Roger: Yes, my user number is: 00228894.

Angela: And could you please confirm your name and the first line of your address, please?

Roger: Yes, it's Roger Williams. 14 Holly Drive.

Angela: OK, thank you. How can I help you today, Mr Williams?

Roger: Well, I bought a computer from IT City and it started to go wrong. I turned on the computer and used it for a couple of hours. Then, I switched it off again. But when I tried to turn it on again about 20 minutes later, it wouldn't come on. I kept pressing the button but it just wouldn't switch on.

Angela: OK. And when did you buy the computer, Mr Williams?

Roger: Yesterday.

Angela: Mmm... and you said the computer was working at first?

Roger: Yes, that's right. There weren't any problems at first, but as soon as I switched it off, it stopped working when I tried to turn it on again. I don't know why because I didn't move it or drop it or anything like that.

Angela: Did you spill any coffee or other liquids on it?

Roger: No, of course not.

Angela: OK. I'm afraid you'll have to speak to our customer service department. Could you call again, please, and select the option for the customer service department – press option 7.

Roger: Call again? Can't you transfer me?

Angela: I'm sorry but our internal telephone transfer system isn't working at the moment. I do apologise for the inconvenience. Goodbye and have a nice day.

Jokes (track 13)

1. Why do you take baths in milk?

I can't find a cow tall enough for a shower.

2. You look very funny wearing that belt.

I'd look even funnier if I wasn't wearing it.

3. Do you find it hard to make decisions?

Well... yes and no. It depends.

4. Waitress, what's this fly doing in my ice cream?

Skiing, sir.

5. What comes after the letter "a"?

The rest of the alphabet

6. Why did the boy throw the butter out of the window?

Because he wanted to see the butterfly

7. When can a car drive over water?

When it's on a bridge.

8. What's the best way to eat spaghetti?

Put it in your mouth.

Films

Mark: So did you see the latest er, Harry Potter, then?

Jenny: I didn't see the new one no, I think it was enough seeing the other ones!

Mark: Really? Why - you think you've had enough, really?

Jenny: Yeah – it's all kind of the same thing, isn't it, really? I don't understand why people get so obsessed with it.

Mark: Yeah, well I saw – I think I saw the first one or two. I thought – I saw the first one at the cinema – uh, I saw the other one on DVD and uh, you know, didn't think it was so good. It's good to see it at the cinema but when you see it on the TV it's not quite so exciting.

Jenny: Yeah, definitely not worth buying the DVD!

Mark: Erm I was - I was really disappointed with the Star Wars films as well because I used to - I saw them when I was like, young – you know, first of the three original ones and then I saw the next lot, and they're just not as good.

Jenny: Yeah. So were you a big fan of the originals, then?

Mark: Yeah I remember my dad took me to see it when I was a boy, and it was great, but um, watching the new ones – I don't know, maybe young - young people like them, but I didn't think they were good at all.

Jenny: Yeah I didn't mind them, but then I didn't have much to compare them to, so.

Mark: Yeah, guess you're not as old as I am!

US Bar Chat (track 22)

Friday Afternoons

Steph: Hi, sorry I'm late!

Grace: Ah, don't worry – I just got here, yeah.

Steph: I always get caught up on Fridays, just can't leave the office.

Grace: Yeah, did you come by bus?

Steph: No, I actually walked today.

Grace: You walked? That's impressive, with all this heat.

Steph: Yeah but it's - it's a nice day and the bus was just taking too long to come.

Grace: Yeah well, it's sweltering, but anyways, it's good to see you.

Steph: You too.

Grace: Yeah, yeah.

Steph: Finally got together.

Grace: Yeah so...

Steph: Hey, your birthday's next week.

Grace: Oh, you remembered.

Steph: Of course!

Grace: I didn't want anyone to remember!

Steph: Oh, you have to celebrate.

Grace: Well, maybe I could have a party. What kind of party do you think I should have?

Steph: Maybe a dinner party?

Grace: Yeah. How about a retro party? What do you think?

Steph: Yeah!

Grace: Yeah, retro.

Steph: I think that's great.

Grace: 70s or 80s, what do you think?

Steph: Let's go 70s.

Grace: 70s, I like that – bell-bottoms, maybe low-riding pants – what do they call those? Hip – what is it – hip huggers?

Steph: Hipsters?

Grace: Yeah.

Steph: All those big sunglasses, they're coming back in style!

Grace: Excellent. I really wish I would have saved all my mother's clothes, yeah!

Steph: Yeah that's great. OK, well, I'm gonna start gathering some clothes and – what are you doing tonight?

Grace: I think I'm gonna go home, buy a bottle of wine and watch some TV. I'm gonna turn into a couch potato.

Steph: Ah, there you go – nice and relaxing!

Public Enemies (track 24)

A new film about American gangster John Dillinger.

Presenter: Today on Movie Moments we're talking about the latest gangster film, Public Enemies, which stars Johnny Depp as tough American gangster John Dillinger. Our very own film critic Sean Roberts went to see the film yesterday – so what's your verdict, Sean?

Sean: Well, I love gangster films, and this one had it all for me: action, suspense and a bit of romance in there as well. And of course, Dillinger is a very interesting character.

Presenter: Yeah, I mean, that must be a really interesting role for an actor. What did you think of Johnny Depp's performance?

Sean: As always, Johnny Depp was great – it was a really convincing performance. Obviously this was a bit of a departure from his Pirates of the Caribbean role – you won't have many children watching him in this one – but he does it really well. You really believe in him and he gets the mixture of charm and danger just right.

Presenter: Yeah, because from what I heard, Dillinger had two sides to him, right?

Sean: Yes, exactly. On the one hand, a lot of the public loved him – he was kind of regarded as the Robin Hood of his day. At the time, it was the Depression and people were angry at the banks for causing the situation – something we can probably sympathise with now – so Dillinger was like a local hero, robbing from the rich and greedy. He definitely had a lot of charm about him. But on the other hand, he was extremely dangerous and ruthless – he and his gang killed several civilians and police officers.

Presenter: Right. And the police had a hard time catching him, didn't they?

Sean: They really did – Dillinger was notorious for managing to escape from the police. It took several attempts to catch him. He even managed to escape from a jail they claimed was "escape-proof". He was on the run for a long time before they finally got him.

Presenter: So, how did they manage to catch him in the end?

Sean: Well, Dillinger was declared "public enemy number one". The guy had a lot of public support, so the police wanted to undermine that. They also got one of the best FBI agents on the case, Melvin Purvis. He was the one who led the final operation when Dillinger was killed.

Presenter: What exactly happened?

Sean: Basically, they were given a tip-off that Dillinger was in the Biograph Theatre watching a film. The police staked out the cinema and waited for Dillinger to come out. He tried to run away but it ended up in a gun fight and Dillinger was shot three times. They called an ambulance but Dillinger was already dead.

Presenter: So, he died young, didn't he?

Sean: Yeah, he was only 31.

Presenter: Sounds like he had a dramatic life. So overall, how would you rate the film, Sean?

Sean: I'd give it a 9 out of 10. It's definitely the best thing in the cinema at the moment.

Presenter: Great. Thanks very much for coming in.

Sean: My pleasure.

Heroes Revisited (track 27)

A look at the life of British nurse Florence Nightingale (1820 - 1910).

Becky: Hi, I'm Becky Wright. Welcome to the show. In today's programme, we're talking about heroes revisited. And here with me is Shane McBride. So, Shane, who's your hero?

Shane: Well, I'm going to be talking about my Florence Nightingale.

Becky: Oh, yes

Shane: As you know, for many years she's been seen as a sort of shining light in the field of nursing, and someone who saved the lives of thousands during the Crimean War. It is true that she was a pioneering nurse who definitely helped improve conditions, and she is certainly responsible for making the nursing service a lot more professional. But the interesting thing is that, at the time, she didn't realise why so many soldiers were dying, and, some even claim that she was indirectly responsible for their deaths, although I do feel that's a bit harsh.

Becky: So, tell us something about her life.
Shane: Well, Florence was born on 12th May 1820 into a rich, upper-class family. Her dream was to become a nurse, but her parents weren't too pleased about this. However, eventually, they gave in. Florence soon became a campaigner for improved medical care for poor people, and worked together with Charles Villiers, who was president of the Poor Law Board. But she really sprung to fame during the Crimean War.

Becky: That was?
Shane: The Crimean War was a war between Britain and France on one side and Russia on the other side and it was fought on Turkish territory. It took place between 1853 and 1856. Anyway, on 21st October 1854, Florence Nightingale and a staff of 38 women volunteer nurses, trained by her, were sent to Turkey to the main British camp. She worked in Scutari barracks, treating wounded soldiers. Medicine was in short supply, standards of hygiene were non-existent and mass infections were common. While she was there, death rates didn't drop – in fact, they began to rise. As a result, hundreds of troops died – mostly from disease. Interestingly, at the time, she believed they were dying because of poor nutrition, but it was actually the unhygienic living conditions that were killing them. She didn't understand this until later when she was back in England.

Becky: So, what is her legacy?
Shane: Well, there's no doubt that she had an important impact on nursing and health care. And many credit her with establishing the foundations for the modern nursing profession. However, we shouldn't over-exaggerate her contribution to improving conditions for soldiers during the actual war. There were many others working out there and really trying to improve the appalling conditions, including Jamaican British nurse Mary Seacole. For many years, her contribution wasn't fully acknowledged. But that's all changing now, and there's even a statue going up for her in St Thomas' Hospital in London.
Becky: OK. That's great. Thanks very much. Very interesting.
Shane: My pleasure.

Off the Cuff (track 33)
Off the cuff. Real questions with real answers from native speakers.

Question: Who's the most annoying person you've ever lived with?

That would have to be my flatmate at the moment. She's a complete nightmare – just everything that I do she notices, er, if you even leave just one little thing that hasn't been washed up, she'll leave you a note the next morning to say that I need to wash it up again. Erm, everything – she always tries to get me to pay more money than I need to – for rent, or whatever we happen to be buying and she's never really that friendly when I speak to her, so I'd kind of be happier living on my own. Er, next time, I think I'm definitely gonna be more picky about my housemates!

Yeah well, the most annoying person I lived with was this erm, girl. She seemed like – she came to an interview – I had put an advert in the newspaper and she came for an interview and she seemed really nice. She was quite young so I thought, yeah, she'll be alright but she was oh, she was a nightmare. She used erm, she used to go in the kitchen and cook and she wouldn't let anyone go in – I couldn't believe it the first time she said it – she said like, "No, I'm sorry, I'm in the kitchen, you can't come in". I was like, "What?" So she – when she was in the kitchen cooking she wouldn't let anyone come in and then she used to cook really weird food that really stank, and she did really strange things like boiling a carrot and eating that with spaghetti. And then there were other really strange things – well, she was really messy as well, terribly messy, terribly – never cleaned up, left her stuff all over the living room, and she was a complete nightmare and in the end she left – luckily – I didn't have to actually ask her to leave, so that was all right. But yeah, she was definitely the worst person I ever lived with.

WORD OF THE MONTH

Gardening leave

THIS MONTH'S WORD OF THE MONTH IS... "GARDENING LEAVE".

What would you do if you were suddenly given two months' paid leave? Apparently, most people in England would do some gardening.

Just imagine the situation. Carol (a fictitious employee) has just resigned from her job at a computer software company. Initially, the company are shocked as she's one of their top program developers. But then they start to worry. What if she helps the competition? What if she copies a client database and takes it with her? Carol still has 30 days to serve at the company, but now they don't want her in the office for security reasons. So, they inform her that is officially on "gardening leave" – still on the payroll, but not permitted to come into the office.

Basically, the term "gardening leave" describes the period of time when an employee (one who has just resigned or who has been sacked) still receives a pay check, but can't come into the office. "Gardening leave" is often given to employees who have occupied sensitive positions within the company – especially if they are leaving to join a competitor. But why "gardening"? Well, in the UK, gardening is a very popular pastime. So, the idea is that while you're sitting at home waiting for your contract to come to an end, you do a bit of gardening. Simple!

"Gardening leave" can also be given to employees who are the object of an internal investigation or whose presence in the office is considered counter-productive. "Gardening leave" is often given to Formula One motor racing technicians who move between teams. If they say they are leaving, they are immediately put on "gardening leave" to stop them taking valuable information with them.

There was a famous case of "gardening leave" in the news a few years ago.

The story became known as the "Prescott affair". The man at the centre of the scandal was John Prescott – the deputy prime minister. Whilst in power, Prescott had a two-year extra-marital affair with one of his secretaries, Tracey Temple. Temple sold her story to a British newspaper and news of the affair became a big story. As a result of the publicity, Temple was put on gardening leave for two months. On her return to work, she was given a low-key post at the University of Westminster. ✪
